BLOOMSBURG (Columbia Co.) — Folks who love red tractors found what they were looking for in Bloomsburg last week.

It was the 14th Annual Red Power Roundup, hosted in Pennsylvania for the first time since 1994. Collectors from across the country and Canada brought more than 800 tractors to the three-day show, according to Ben Trapani, president of International Harvester (IH) Collectors Chapter 17 in Pennsylvania.

Plans for Pennsylvania

HON. DENNIS C. WOLFF
Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture

Editor's note: This issue we introduce a new monthly column, Plans For Pennsylvania, by the Hon. Dennis C. Wolff, Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture. Wolff, owner of Pen-Col Farms, operates a 700-acre, 500-head dairy farm specializing in purebred Holstein genetics. The president of the Nicholas Wolff Foundation, Inc., Wolff is a Master Farmer.

Agriculture, Pennsylvania's top industry, has had its share of challenges. Despite the droughts of a year ago, the seemingly endless rains of this planting season, low milk prices, animal health, and environmental issues, Pennsylvania's agriculture industry re-

Campaign Promotes Locally Grown Food

PHILADELPHIA — It has become increasingly clear in recent years that, if family farms are to flourish once again across the American countryside, farmers must reconnect in a meaningful way with their closest neighbors and with the rural communities in their region.

Fortunately, at the same time that many farmers are rediscovering the enduring value of their neighbors, average consumers are expressing a preference to buy food that is grown on nearby farms, by farmers who they can know and visit, using methods that assure accountability and high quality.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The session began with a New York State senator and ended with a Virginia cattleman. During a last-chance effort late last week, speakers were given three minutes to voice their opinions on the controversial Country of Origin Labeling (COOL) law at the USDA's final listening session here at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center.

Written testimony was also accepted. Of the 45 who had signed up to speak, many also submitted written information which they could not present in the allotted three minutes.

E.S. Yates, administrator of the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS), opened the listening and education session with a brief statement welcoming the approximately 150 people scattered throughout the room for their interest in contributing information. USDA/AMS has the job of implementing the COOL legislation as mandated by Congress in the 2002 Farm Bill.

William Sessions, AMS deputy administrator, provided a brief review of the current thinking on the regulations and the labeling of imported commodities. He said AMS must establish a compliance review process which would involve a recordkeeping trail of origin claims. A fine of $10,000 per offense for willful violations is already mandated in the law, he noted.

Sessions made no mention of the tempest stirred up at the Lancaster Cattle Feeder's Day Feb. 4 in the same room when he presented a run through of the labeling law. Area cattle feeders were aghast at the possible record keeping involved to, wit.. quired, provide traceback on all

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .8500-.9300. Class III, spot prices: .7400-.8200.

SPOTS SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This Week: In 0, Out 52; Last Week In 0, Out 96; Last Week In 0, Out 64. SOUTHEAST STATES: This Week: In 0, Out 0; Last Week In 0, Out 0; Last Week In 0, Out 0.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Due to changes in milk supply agreements, milk import/export totals are not directly comparable to year ago figures and to shipments prior to April 1, 2003.

This week, there have been a lot of conversations and discussions about a national organization's self-help program and the pending vote, by their board of directors, to approve the plan. Apparently, there wasn't enough support for the original plan and another, less aggressive plan was adopted. Contacts close to the issue, citing sharply higher cheese prices, lower cow numbers, and below year ago milk output feel that the plan may be beyond reviving at this time.

Milk production is easing lower in the northern parts of the region; noticeably lower in Florida and other Gulf Coast States. Hot weather in Florida the past few days has taken its toll on the cows and milk output. The number of loads of milk shipped out of state for processing has dropped significantly in the past two weeks. In most other parts of the region, temperatures and humidity are rising, which is having an adverse effect on milk production. Off- farm loads are lighter weights and haulers are consolidating routes. Contacts continue to report low butterfat and protein tests on incoming milk. Bottled milk sales are generally slow to fair. The improved, summer-like weather is expected to increase tourists to the shore and bottlers report some long awaited improvement in orders from restaurants and other outlets along the Coast. Fluid milk supplies are lighter and easily handled. Surplus milk volumes are easing lower and following early week trading at the CME, contacts feel that more milk will now be moving through cheese plants.

The condensed skim market is mostly steady, but recent price increases on cheese at the CME have many producers saying that if the cheese price holds, prices for wet solids will be going up in the near future. Demand for condensed skim is often improved now that soft serve mix orders are increasing. Also, cheese makers that have increased production are taking some extra loads.

The fluid cream market remains very strong. Supplies are tight and demand is good. Spot prices are higher as multiples are now routinely in the 140's and the CME average did increase slightly last week. More reports of cream loads being delivered at multiples in the 150's are noted this week. Cream loads are moving greater distances to supplement Eastern supplies. Some easing of demand from ice cream makers was noted as many of them will be closed an extra day this holiday weekend. Soft serve production is significantly higher as the hot weather has triggered demand up and down the East Coast. The hot weather has set off a number of load rejections due to high arriving temperatures. These loads usually cleared easily as long as acidity levels were within tolerances. Bottled cream sales are improving as the strawberry season progresses north. Churning activity is lighter at most plants.

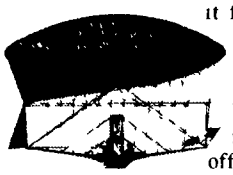
The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC — THIS WEEK WITH

JULY 7–13, 2003

FULL BUCK MOON, JULY 13

BIRTHDAY OF THE BLIMP

July 8, 1838, was the birthday of German Count Ferdinand von Zeppelin, inventor of the airship called the zeppelin, or dirigible. It is also known as a blimp, a word that some believe comes from its airship classification as a "Type B-limp." Von Zeppelin put an engine on his airship in 1900, three years before the Wright brothers designed their engine, but the zeppelin was lighter than air, which distinguished it from heavier-than-air craft such as planes. The British used blimps in World War I to scout for submarines. Today, blimps proudly float above most major sporting events, offering televised broadcasts.



You haven't seen a tree until you see its shadow from the sky.

–Amelia Earhart American aviator (1897–1937)

TIP OF THE WEEK

When flying, chew gum or drink a little juice to clear the ears on takeoff and landing.

SWEET-POTATO CUSTARD PIE

- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 1 2/3 cups milk
- 3 eggs
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1 teaspoon grated fresh orange rind
- 1 cup mashed, cooked sweet potato
- 1 unbaked 9-inch pie shell

Preheat oven to 350°F. Mix the sugar, milk, eggs, salt, ginger, and orange rind into the cooked sweet potato. Scoop into the unbaked pie shell and bake for 1 hour, or until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean.

Makes 8 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

A Fair Perspective

Guest Editorial By President Abraham Lincoln

Editor's Note: It's fair season. The following text is a complete reprint from the 1956 Fair Dealer, relating the text of a Speech President Abraham Lincoln gave in 1859 to the Wisconsin State Agriculture Society in Milwaukee, Wis.

Fairs of agriculture are useful in more ways than one. They bring us together, and thereby make us better acquainted and better friends than we otherwise would be. From the first appearance of man upon the earth down to very recent times, the words "stranger" and "enemy" were quite or almost synonymous.

Long after civilized nations had defined robbery and murder as high crimes, and had fixed severe punishments to them, when practiced among and upon their own people respectively, it was deemed no offense but even meritorious to rob and murder and enslave strangers, whether as nations or as individuals. Even yet, this has not totally disappeared.

The man of the highest moral cultivation, in spite of all which abstract principal can do, likes him whom he does know much better than him whom he does not know. To correct the evils, great and small which springs from want of sympathy and from positive enmity among strangers, as nations or as individuals, is one of the highest functions of civilization.

To this end our agricultural fairs contribute in no small degree. They render more pleasant, and stronger, and more durable the bond

To Appreciate The Advantages Of Living In The Northeastern United States

I just returned from a trip with my family visiting the national parks in several northwestern states. My son mentioned that he learned to appreciate how good we have it in Pennsylvania on this trip.

First he noted that gasoline prices are lower at home than in any of the states we visited. Second, Pennsylvania is green! Most of the Northwest is arid, where water access and availability is a real challenge. While too much rainfall has tended to cause problems this year in agriculture, a visit to an arid area puts things in perspective. My son also noted that while we "live in the country," we still have easy access to the conveniences of urban areas.

I would add we also have relatively easy access to the population centers, which are huge markets for our agricultural products. So while we can get frustrated at times with the challenges we all face, sometimes travel to another area helps us appreciate the good things we have.

To Control Summer Mastitis

With the higher temperatures that are finally here, summer mastitis flare-ups will usually increase. Lancaster County Dairy Agent Beth Grove points out that increased infections are often caused by increased bacteria numbers — higher temperatures allow environmental bacteria to multiply rapidly. Cows are highly susceptible to infection if their teats come in contact with high numbers of bacteria, particularly when they are under heat stress. Summer flies can cause extra problems with infection, as will cattle seeking wet, shady spots, ponds, and slow-moving streams.

There are a number of management steps that can be taken to help control summer mastitis. There is very little we can do to control temperatures, but bacteria need food and moisture in addition to heat to thrive. This is why it is important in the summer to scrape often and remove manure (bacteria food) from cow holding areas. Since milk is also a food source, teat dipping is important to kill bacteria at the teat end. Keeping cows well-bedded and stalls clean and dry is also vital to summer mastitis control.

Keep cattle out of shady, wet spots, ponds, and areas of wet bedding. Not only will this reduce environmental infections, but can prevent diseases such as Lepto from gaining a foothold in the herd. Provide plenty of fresh water for cows during the summer months.

In addition to spreading infection, flies will cause cows to bunch up and increase heat stress. Since flies can spread certain types of mastitis from cow to cow, use fly control to limit udder exposure. Be careful to use an approved product for lactating cows in the milking herd.

If cows spend extended time on pasture, consider a portable shade. If you do not already have tunnel or natural ventilation, contemplate one of these systems to reduce heat stress for the herd. For more information on ventilation and heat stress abatement, contact your local extension agent for guidelines.

To Understand New Federal CAFO Rules

New Federal Concentrated Animal Feeding Operation (CAFO) rules were put into effect in April of this year. These new rules were the result of a long process.

The federal Clean Water Act of 1972 established a comprehensive program to protect water quality through a permit program for "point" sources of water pollution. The USEPA created two rules in the 1970s that affected animal agriculture. One of these created The National Pollution Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permit program, which defined farms needing a discharge permit as CAFOs. The second rule created the Effluent Limitations Guidelines (ELGs), which set technology and performance requirements for CAFOs.

States were charged with implementing NPDES permitting. While 45 states, including Pennsylvania, took responsibility for this program, the progress in implementation was criticized as slow and ineffective in protecting water quality from the pollution contributions of a changing animal agricultural sector. Nationally, permitting was found to be inequitable in terms of regional and state differences and the animal species included in the program. A Natural Resources Defense Council lawsuit was filed against USEPA for failing to adequately implement the law. It led to a court order requiring the agency to revise and update the federal CAFO rules by December 2002.

To help farmers understand how these changes will impact them, Penn State Cooperative Extension has developed a new publication entitled "New Federal CAFO Rules: Which Pennsylvania Livestock And Poultry Operations Will Be Affected?" The free 7-page guide will help farmers and citizens understand which livestock and poultry operations are likely to be affected by new water quality regulations from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The guide explains why EPA revised the federal CAFO rules, highlights the major changes to the rules, outlines the process for incorporating the new rules into the current state CAFO program, and provides guidance to Pennsylvania producers to help them determine if they will need a permit and how they may be affected. It also includes a list of educational resources.

For those with Internet access, the publication is available on the Penn State Nutrient and Water Policy Website at http://agenvpolicy.aers.psu.edu. For hard copies of the publication, call the Publications Distribution Center, (814) 865-6713, or send written request to the Publications Distribution Center, The Pennsylvania State University, 112 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor:

Farmers and ranchers did not fare well in the House Appropriations Committee's FY-04 agriculture appropriations bill. Compared to last year, the bill cuts $870 million in discretionary spending and $6 million in mandatory spending for key agriculture programs such as conservatin, renewable energy, agriculture credit, and research.

In addition, it includes language to prohibit the secretary of agriculture from continuing writing rules for mandatory country-of-origin labeling for beef, pork, lamb, or fish. It is simply unconceivable that an attack on country-of-origin meat labeling would be attempted at a time of heightened concerns from America's consumers and trading partners about the origin of our meat.

Following the recent "mad cow" case in Canada, our number one and number three beef

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

A GOOD WORK

Background Scripture:
Nehemiah 1 through 2.
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 26:1-9.

Wouldn't it wonderful is your local newspaper would carry just one page entitled "Good News"? It would serve as a kind of antidote for all the bad news that fills our printed media. Another idea would be to try to strike some balance on the front page between good news and bad news. But, of course, bad news sells papers — good news doesn't. Even television productions like "Sixty Minutes" are written on the evidence that reports of bad deeds will always bring in more viewers than stories on good works.

Yet, if you look for them, you can find quite a bit of news about good works, even though they may be buried beneath the obituaries.

Aldersgate, the Sunday school class we attend at First United Methodist Church in Dallas, Texas, is composed of senior citizens who spend much of their available energy and time doing good, if often unrecognized, works of compassion and caring. This includes a fine band that plays "gigs" for all kinds of occasions, donating their fees to some of the good works to which the class contributes. These people are involved in good works both inside and outside the church.

Yet, as many good works as we can find, we live in a world that needs more and more of them. That means that these opportunities to help lift and heal other people are never exhausted. If you haven't found any, either you are a hermit living in the wilderness or you just are not opening your eyes and ears.

The Good Work Begins

The Book of Nehemiah is the story of a people who are challenged to do a good work and, under the right leadership, they rose up to meet it. The story opens in Susa of Elam, the winter capital of the kings of Persia. The month is Chislev, comparable to our November-December.

Some of the Jews carried off into exile by the Babylonians are living there and one of them, Nehemiah, is a palace servant of Artaxerxes. His is a very responsible, trusted position, cupbearer to the king, which means that he sampled every cup of wine that the king drank. Nehemiah was trusted to protect him from poisoning.

Some Jews from Jerusalem came to Susa, perhaps to ask for help. Nehemiah hears their tale of woe: those not carried into captivity are merely surviving in a Jerusalem vulnerable to contempt and attack. The good work begins, as it usually does, with Nehemiah not only listening to their plight but caring about it even though he and his fellow exiles lived in comparative security and prosperity a far distance from Jerusalem. This is transcendent caring, reaching beyond one's own situation and interests. He listened to their plight and the seeds of the good work were planted.

Nehemiah's next reaction was to enter into a period of prayer and fasting so that he might be open and responsive to God. Fasting is not much practiced today, but it is a fine discipline, for it helps us to get rid of that which has the power to be an impediment between ourselves and God. In fact, beyond fasting, we need to regularly recognize and get rid of that which keeps us from being in communion with God.

Plain Talk

Whenever we are moved by compassion to seek God's counsel, we usually end up doing what Nehemiah did: he faced the king and told him plainly what was needed. That is where many of us bail out — we find it difficult to confront people so that we may communicate with them about the good work that needs to be done. Nehemiah didn't beat around the bush — he told it as it was.

Nehemiah decided to go to Jerusalem to rebuild the city's walls, but it was a project too big for just one man. So, he takes the facts to the Jews in captivity. He tells them of the situation in Jerusalem, the scorn and dangers from its neighbors. He also tells them of the king's encouragement and the assurance given by God. Too often we may try to enlist people for good works without sharing with them all the facts.

Nehemiah does not rebuild the walls of Jerusalem by himself, but he is the one who challenges and inspires the people to do so. So we come to the final step in beginning the good work: "And they said, 'Let us rise up and build.' So they strengthened their hands for the good work." They committed themselves.

That's how he did it. How will you do the good work that lies so close at hand?

OPPORTUNITIES FOR LOCKING IN MILK PRICES?

- CME futures expects a fall peak of $13 per CWT.
- Overall market improving.
- Risk management opportunities.

Ever since the Milk Production report was released, the futures markets have shown steady support for Class III futures, particularly for the fall months. As of June 27, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange (CME) Class III futures peaked at $13 per CWT for September/October. So, what should you do?

First, let's review the market. The May Milk Production report from USDA showed May milk production for 20 select states down 0.4 percent relative to a year ago. Cow numbers declined from the previous month and yield per cow was down from the same month a year ago.

The Cold Storage report indicated that while butter inventories in May were up 30 percent from a year ago, cheese stocks were even with a year ago. That is good news for cheese.

So why is the fall Class III futures at the CME showing strength? Here are my guesses:

- Lower cow numbers and yield per cow.
- Improving economy.
- Lower retail dairy prices.
- CWT plan.

There is no doubt that the market is expecting less milk to be produced in the coming months. This will be mainly because of lower cow numbers. There were reports that rising cull prices because of the ban on Canadian beef exports have sparked greater culling. But producers I've talked with said those cull prices have since come down. But lower profitability in the dairy industry will result in lower cow numbers for the rest of the year. And there is talk that poor crop/forage conditions in much of the U.S. could adversely affect yield per cow.

Lower retail prices for dairy products and a slight improvement in the U.S. economy could be putting a little more muscle into the futures market. Clearly, stronger consumer demand is needed to revive milk prices. Commercial disappearance of most dairy products through April does not look particularly good.

What is not known is what impact The National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF) CWT plan (Cooperatives Working Together) is having on market out-

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.
Friday, June 27, 2003
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER CATTLE SUMMARY - Week Ending June 27 — NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER CATTLE SUMMARY Total Receipts: 255,400; last week 255,100; last year 260,000. Direct: 78,800; last week 59,900; last year 56,500. Video/Internet: 3,300; last week 18,700; last year none. Auctions: 173,300, last week 176,500; last year 203,500. This weeks reported auction volume included only 39% over 600 lbs (due to a heavy influence from the Southeast), and 44% heifers.

Compared to last week; yearling feeder cattle sold steady to 2.00 higher with most gains seen in the auction markets. Direct yearling sales were steady to firm as buyers are reluctant to pay higher prices, unless the cattle are in front of them and they are being pushed by the guy in the next row. The enormous strength of the feeder market is as hard to explain as the weakness in the slaughter market.

The fed cattle market continued to fade this week to 74.00, yet beef demand remains good and market-ready numbers are still tight as the Canadian border remains closed to all beef products. The northern farmer-feeders are a major driving force as they are armed with both a silo and a field full of corn. Fancy 8-weight steers in Bassett, Nebraska reached 95.00 this week. However, the major High Plains feedlots are doing their part as well with a string of 1400 Kansas bound 7-weight feeder heifers in Joplin, Missouri selling from 84.20-86.70. Neither of these purchases look too promising at the present time, but empty pens wont pay the bills when your business is selling feed.

If more CME futures traders would get as optimistic about the fall fat market as the cattle feeders are then, maybe things would pencil out a little better. Lightweight Southeastern calves sold 1.00-3.00 higher this week, but farther west anything weighing under 600 lbs was hard to find. Although, the heavy new-crop calves in the central US traded 2.00-3.00 higher as buyers search for a yearling substitute. Auction receipts across the Northern Plains and Mountain States are extremely light.

This was not the case a year ago when extreme drought forced cattle off pastures and into town, including countless herds of breeding stock. Severe storms and heavy rain swept across Nebraska and South Dakota this past week.

The Canadian border saga continues to drag-on as the US Government searches for a way to keep our Asian beef customers happy and still show mercy on our good neighbors to the north. Meanwhile, a single positive BSE case and the subsequent ban on exports has taken the Canadian beef industry to its knees. The Canadian slaughter cattle market has fallen from near 80.00 to below 50.00 since the outbreak was reported.

Enthusiasts Gather For Red Power Roundup

models from the 1920s to late-model IH tractors. Plenty of Cub Cadets, the lawn tractor born in 1961, were also featured, as well IH trucks, and a wide range of products and parts offered for sale by vendors.

This unique 1944-46 "Double A" Farmall was brought to the Roundup by Clare Kerns of Chambersburg.

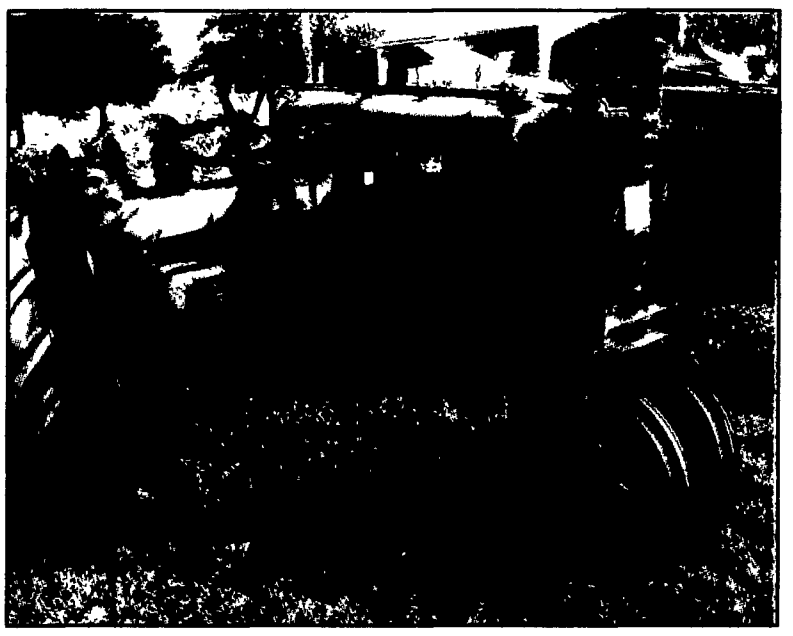
One of many IH enthusiasts at the Roundup was Jonathan Dinterman. He traveled to Bloomsburg from his home in Bunker Hill, W.Va., with father Richard and brother Adam. The Dintermans have a number of early-model red tractors, including a 1939 F-20 that Jonathan drove in the Roundup's IH tractor pull.

Dennis Wolff, Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture and dairy farmer from Millville, a town near Bloomsburg, was on hand for the opening ceremonies. He was joined by Bill Swope, president of National IH Collectors Inc.; Fred Trump, president of the Bloomsburg Fair Association; and Trapani.

According to Trapani, Pennsylvania has about 600 IH collector members out of a total of about 6,500 in the country. Thirty chapters function in 24 states. Significant numbers of IH collectors can also be found in Canada and Sweden.

The Red Power Roundup began 14 years ago as a nationwide gathering of IH enthusiasts. Last year's Roundup took place in Illinois. The 2004 event is scheduled for June 24-26 in Iowa.

Activities offered to Roundup visitors this year included tours of Bartlow's IH Prototype building in Millville, equipment parades, tractor pulls, tractor games, and live musical entertainment.



This 1928 Farmall, owned by Rick Merrill of Loudon, N.H., was one of more than 800 tractors on display at the Red Power Roundup in Bloomsburg last week.

Township Officials Learn About Legal Issues Of Ag Businesses

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

STRASBURG (Lancaster Co.) — "We try to preserve a lot of farmland around here, but we try to preserve farms as well," said Don Robinson, administrator, Lancaster County Conservation District (LCCD).

"There is no sense preserving the farm if we can't preserve the farmer."

Part of "preserving the farmer" is enabling producers to operate on-farm businesses. A meeting Monday evening at R Farm in Strasburg brought together county and township officials to discuss sideline or incidental businesses on the farm.

A picnic drew 130 people and the subsequent meeting drew 70 officials to have their questions answered on legal aspects of on-farm businesses.

Les Houck, Salisbury Township supervisor; Lowell Fry, Rapho Township supervisor; and Frank Howe, Leacock Township supervisor discussed how their township handles farm businesses.

The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and the LCCD sponsored the evening.

Christine Kellett, director of the Penn State/Dickinson School of Law's Ag Law Research and Education Center, presented ideas on "what officials can do to help keep farmers farming," she said.

Kellett first discussed the "Right to Farm" Law, which "really isn't a rights law. It was originally put together by legislators to protect farmers from nuisance ordinances and nuisance lawsuits," said Kellett.

Under the law, "if a farmer has been farming the same way for a year, they can't be sued unless there is a direct affect on health and safety," according to Kellett. In addition, a farm can make a substantial change if the producer has a certified nutrient management plan.

The law also allows direct marketing of products produced on the farm — despite zoning ordnances of the local community — if 50 percent of the goods sold are produced on the farm.

Putting signs out to advertise products is allowed on site. However "farmers are finding that if they're down a road, they'd like to have the ability to put signs down the road to point customers in," she said.

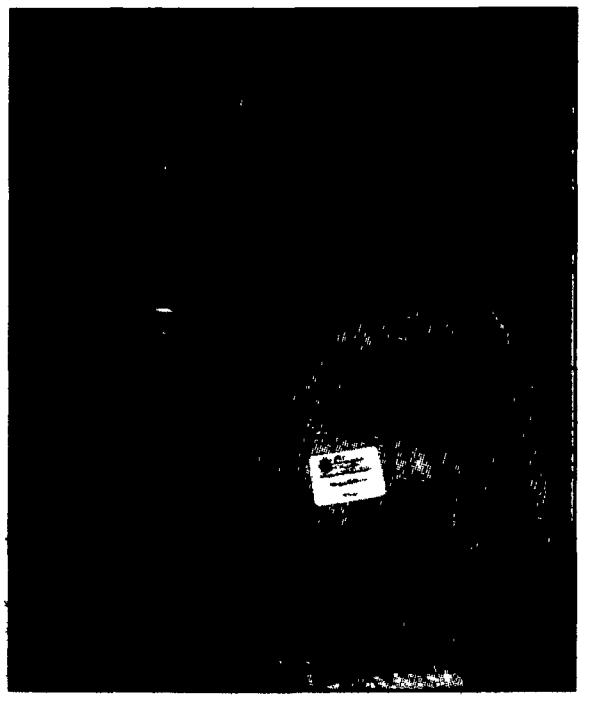
Township officials could look for ways to "write ordinances to help farmers, on a seasonal basis, guide customers to the farm," she said.

A second law which helps farmers is the Ag Area Security Act. This law allows a landowner or group of landowners with 250 contiguous acres to petition the township to form an ag security area.

With this law, the owners are eligible for the conservation easement program, and allows the township to pass two-tier ordinances (less restrictions for ag operations).

Another helpful law is the preferential taxation put forth in the Clean and Green law, allowing farm and forest land to be taxed at a lower rate ("use value" as opposed to "fair market value," according to Kellett.)

Christine Kellett, director of the Ag law Research and Education Center, presented information on the legal issues of on-farm businesses.



Host Roger Rohrer introduces the farm, which includes a poultry operation and quilt and mulch businesses.

The law allows a producer to use two acres toward direct sales of ag-related products, or for a rural enterprise.

Special-use or special-events permits granted by the township may be one way for farmers in easement plans to host such events as concerts, something that they cannot do if they are in the Clean and Green program.

Les Houck, Salisbury Township supervisor; Lowell Fry, Rapho Township supervisor; and Frank Howe, Leacock Township supervisor, discussed how their townships have handled sideline or incidental businesses.

Houck discussed how the township is allowing farmers to use small and outdated farm buildings, such as old chicken houses, for storage. Farmers may also rent out buildings to small businesses, he said.

Fry's township allows business "as long as it is complimentary, incidental, and doesn't interfere with normal farming practices," he said. The township also allows landowners to rent out buildings — "small business incubators," said Fry — to enterprises such as woodworking or lawn care.

Leacock Township, said Howe, is in the process of rewriting ordinances and is looking at allowing ag-related business in the ag districts "for the purpose of keeping farm families together," he said.

One example is allowing businesses such as contractors that are based on the farm. As long as the business is fairly concealed on the farm, they are approved by the township, he said.

The evening also included an introduction to R Farm by Roger Rohrer. The 125-acre farm includes a 50,000-bird poultry operation and a mulch and quilt business.

Rohrer is employed with First Union National Bank as an ag lender. His wife, Kandy, is a full-time homemaker. She also operates a home-based business, "Kandy's Quilts," that produces and markets approximately 100 log cabin quilts each year.

They are joined by three children: Todd is the main operator of the farm, Mark is a milk hauler, and Ashlee will be a senior in high school.

Sallie Gregory, education coordinator for the LCCD, presents information about water to children attending Monday evening's event.

Northern Bedford Wins State Judging Contest

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

LOYSBURG (Bedford Co.) — Northern Bedford FFA's dairy judging team emerged in first place during FFA Activities Week at Penn State.

Carissa Ebersole, a senior and Bedford County's dairy princess, and Andrew Ritchey, a sophomore, 2003 graduate Jennifer Cogan, and Kenny Stanton, Everett, made up the winning team.

Jennifer and Michelle Clapper are also on the team. The six FFA members show dairy cattle at area fairs as well as dairy shows across the state.

FFA members judged on general knowledge, production records, dairy management practices, linear evaluation, and ranking of pedigrees. The event included a written exam as well as actual judging of several classes of Holstein and Jersey cows with the additional requirement of oral reasons for placement.

The team practiced judging with emphasis on linear evaluation at the Randy Huntsman farm at Martinsburg and also practiced at the Steven Ritchey farm. In addition, the members gained judging experience in a spring event at Penn State and at the All-American Show in Harrisburg.

Ritchey finished third in individual judging and Stanton was sixth.

The winning team received a plaque and $1,000 toward the cost of attending the national competition in Louisville in the fall.

Brittany Boyd, also of Northern Bedford, received a plaque and $100 for her speech on the bald eagle. She received county area and regional accolades and qualified for state competition. She will be a sophomore at Northern Bedford.

A team from Northern Bedford composed of Trent Border, junior; Heather Sparks, senior; and Nicki Reasy, sophomore, competed in floriculture. Border earned silver. Sparks and Reasy each received a bronze medal.

Northern FFA members Tracy Carl, Mary Ann Musselman, Tracy Bupp, and Kaitlyn Eller also competed in horse selection. Tyler Hall competed in land judging.

FFA advisers at Northern are Kay Kring and James Over.

Brittany Boyd, an incoming Northern Bedford sophomore, won first place on the state FFA level in the junior prepared speech competition. Her topic was the bald eagle.

U.S. Hog, Pig Inventory Down

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. inventory of all hogs and pigs on June 1, 2003, was 58.7 million head. This was 3 percent below June 1, 2002, and 1 percent above March 1, 2003, according to the National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS).

- Breeding inventory, at 5.94 million head, was down 4 percent from June 1, 2002, and slightly below last quarter.
- Market hog inventory, at 52.8 million head, was 2 percent below last year and 1 percent above last quarter.

The March-May 2003 U.S. pig crop, at 25.1 million head, was 3 percent less than 2002, and 2 percent less than 2001. Sows farrowing during this period totaled 2.82 million head, 4 percent below last year. The sows farrowed during this quarter represented 47 percent of the breeding herd.

The average pigs per litter was 8.88 pigs saved per litter for the March-May 2003 period, compared to 8.82 last year. Pigs saved per litter by size of operation ranged from 7.60 for operations with 1-99 hogs to 9.00 for operations with more than 5,000 hogs and pigs.

U.S. hog producers intend to have 2.83 million sows farrow during the June-August 2003 quarter, 2 percent below the actual farrowings during the same period in both 2002 and 2001. Intended farrowings for September-November 2003, at 2.79 million sows, are 1 percent below the same period in 2002, and 3 percent below 2001.

The total number of hogs under contract, owned by operations with over 5,000 head, but raised by contractees, accounted for 35 percent of the total U.S. hog inventory, up from 32 percent last year.

REVISIONS: All inventory and pig crop estimates for June 2002 through March 2003 were reviewed using final pig crop, official slaughter, death loss, import, and export data in U.S. level balance sheets. Based on the findings of this review, a slight adjustment of less than one-half percent was made to the March 1, 2003 inventory.

USDA CONSIDERS EXTENSION OF LAMB ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

CENTENNIAL, Colo. — In response to a request to Secretary of Agriculture Ann M. Veneman, for a a one-year extension of the Lamb Meat Adjustment Assistance Program (LMAAP), USDA Under Secretary Bill Hawks addressed the issue in a letter to Senator Craig Thomas (R-WY) and Senator Max Baucus (D-MT), initiators of this request, and their colleagues.

The American Sheep Industry Association (ASI) has obtained a copy of the letter. In the letter, Hawks writes, "We believe the LMAAP provided much needed assistance during a critical time for the sheep industry and has improved returns to producers thus fulfilling the program's objectives." He goes on to address the increase in prices for feeder and slaughter lambs since 1999, when the programs began.

Even though payments have been made on the retention or purchase of over 1.3 million ewe lambs to increase the quality and size of the U.S. flock, Hawks stated that they "do recognize that the ewe lamb expansion portion of the program was curtailed as a result of the serious drought conditions in many parts of the United States.

"As we consider your request to extend the LMAAP for an additional year, we will evaluate the overall condition of the sheep industry before making a final decision," concluded Hawks.

ASI President Guy Flora is encouraged by this response. "Under Secretary Hawks has identified the strengths of these programs but also realizes the negative impact the drought had on the final success," said Flora. "ASI looks forward to future updates as Secretary Veneman makes her decision on the one-year extension of LMAAP."

Specter and Thomas Support LMAAP Extension

U.S. Senator Arlen Specter (R-Penn) and U.S. Representative Bill Thomas (R-Calif) added their support for the one-year extension of the Lamb Market Adjustment Assistance Program (LMAAP) recently with letters to Ann M. Veneman, Secretary of the Department of Agriculture.

Specter argued that "as ranchers and farmers across the state of Pennsylvania struggle to recover from one of the worst droughts ever an extension of assistance of another year to July 31, 2004, would help lamb producers complete the task of recovery and, more importantly, adapt to the considerable structural changes suffered by their domestic markets over the last few years."

"There is a significant sheep and lamb presence in my District," stated Thomas. "My constituent producers have informed me that they support the LMAAP because they consider its programs to have proven crucial to the enhanced competitiveness of the United States lamb industry." Thomas cited his support along with that of the California Wool Growers and the American Sheep Industry Association (ASI).

ASI Allows Lamb Board To Use Promotion Items

The American Sheep Industry Association (ASI) Executive Board, through a unanimous vote, approved a motion to allow the American Lamb Board (ALB) use of the ASI American Lamb Council proprietary products through a license agreement to protect the integrity of the trademarked and copyrighted material until such a time that the Board ceases to use the products. At that time, the products would revert to ASI.

ASI provided temporary use of all lamb products to the ALB beginning in February 2003, but this new motion allows the ALB to use these products indefinitely — at no cost. Some of the items involved include: lamb cut and lamb dish photography, nutritional data, hundreds of different lamb recipes and promotion items as well as the recently developed lamb logo and campaign slogan.

"Allowing the use of these products will save the American Lamb Board tens of thousands of dollars and help them jump-start their American lamb promotion. It is also an opportunity for ASI to show its positive support for the board and for the service it is providing the industry," stated ASI President Guy Flora.

"Under Dan's leadership, we will have a knowledgeable advertising and public relations executive along with a skilled communicator who understands livestock producers," noted Margaret Magruder, secretary and co-chair of the selection committee.

Northampton County Farm Owners Attend Farmland Preservation Meeting

NAZARETH (Northampton Co.) — Farm owners are the architects of our county because the decisions they make with their land will impact what our county will look like. Is selling to developers the only option that farm owners have who are selling their land? About forty farm owners filled the Plainfield Township Building, April 3, to hear about other options.

Maria Bentzoni, the new administrator of Farmland Preservation in Northampton County, explained the process and the benefits of selling the development rights on your land. She emphasized that even after the sale of those rights, farm owners still own the land, are still responsible for it, and can one day sell it to an ever-increasing market.

The combination of funds received from Farmland Preservation plus the sale of the land often is more than what a developer will pay for the land. Depending on the location, soil type, and other criteria, there is a $10,000 cap per acre that can be paid in this program. The average price paid per acre is $2,300.

Jeff Zahr, the Lehigh County administrator of Farmland Preservation spoke about Act 153, a little-known law that freezes school taxes on preserved agricultural land in a school district. Act 153 must be enacted by a local school board, with the advantage to them being that the land will not be developed. Residential development causes local taxes to increase with the need for increased essential services, such as police and fire protection, and increases in school taxes. The average cost to educate a single student is on average $8,000 per year, while the average house pays a school tax of approximately $2,000 per year. The $6,000 deficit has to be made up somewhere. Only three Bucks Co. school disticts have enacted Act 153 to date.

Bill Mineo, the director of the Lehigh-Delaware Heritage Corridor, stressed the importance of keeping the farmer profitable as the ultimate method of farmland preservation. Growing commodity crops, where the price for the harvest is dictated by the market, often leaves the farmer with a deficient return on their investment. Direct marketing, selling to large local companies and schools or directly to consumers at farmers markets, is a way to eliminate the middle-man. He emphasized the importance of keeping agriculture in Northampton County to maintain the pastoral beauty in Northampton County.

During the round table discussion phase of the meeting, specific questions from the farm owners were addressed about our local farmland preservation program. Similar programs are being planned in other townships around the County.

N.J. Foundation To Recognize Ag Teacher

BROADWAY, N.J. — The New Jersey FFA Foundation has announced the establishment of the Harry Schnieber Honorary Scholarship Endowment Fund and will kick off fundraising efforts Saturday, Sept. 20, at Warren Grange No. 110 Hall, located here at 6:30 pm.

Harry Schnieber, a well-known Belvidere resident, taught agriculture at Belvidere High School from 1939-1978. Schnieber not only built the agriculture program at Belvidere, but he literally built his own classroom by salvaging an old schoolhouse from across town.

He also planned and supervised the construction of the present classroom facility in 1975. With a beginning enrollment of 19 students, his classes grew to an annual enrollment of 140 by 1978 when he retired, including some third-generation students. It is estimated that more than 1,000 students were enrolled in his classes over the years.

Schnieber demonstrated his commitment to the community through his participation in many local, state, and national committees and functions. While teaching and after retirement, he conducted Young Farmer classes. He served as treasurer of the New Jersey FFA Foundation, Inc. for 13 years. He was an active member of the New Jersey Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association, White Township Board of Education, and Rotary, and he served as a scoutmaster, Master of Rocksburg Grange #117, and a trustee of Belvidere Methodist Church. He continues to farm and operates Stoneyfield Orchards in Belvidere.

The New Jersey FFA Foundation, Inc. also is searching for former students to share in this special recognition event on Sept. 20. Former students and friends who are interested in taking part, or anyone else who needs directions or more information on this project, should contact New Jersey FFA Foundation, Inc. Treasurer Michael Iannitelli at (908) 213-9722.

Those interested in making a contribution can send a tax-deductible donation to the Harry Schnieber Honorary Scholarship Endowment Fund, New Jersey FFA Foundation, Inc., P.O. Box 237, Belvidere, NJ 07823.

USDA Begins Sign-Up For New Crop Disaster Program

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Sign-up for the USDA's Crop Disaster Program (CDP) for the 2001 or 2002 crop began Friday, June 6. The closing date for sign-up will be announced at a later date, but producers will be given ample opportunity to complete the process.

Payments for CDP are authorized by the Agricultural Assistance Act of 2003, signed into law on Feb. 20, 2003, to provide some $2 billion in aid for producers suffering from natural disasters. The CDP has no funding limitation but each producer is limited to $80,000.

Under CDP, producers will be reimbursed for qualifying crop production and quality losses to crops (other than sugar cane, sugar beets or tobacco) for either the 2001 or 2002 crops.

Payments will be issued for losses exceeding 35 percent of expected production at 50 percent of the established price for crops that were covered by crop insurance, 50 percent of the established price for crops for which crop insurance was not available, and 45 percent of the established price to producers for crops that could have been insured but were not.

USDA's Farm Service Agency (FSA) has developed a Website that provides producers with one convenient location for details on new and existing disaster assistance. The Website can be accessed at http://disaster.fsa.usda.gov.

For more information about CDP and other disaster assistance, contact or visit local county FSA offices or USDA Service Centers.

Slaughter Cattle Weekly Review

Oklahoma City, Okla.

Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL SLAUGHTER CATTLE SUMMARY - Week Ending June 27: Slaughter cattle selling steady to 1.00 lower. Demand moderate and improving as week progresses. Packers looking at an upcoming short kill week but continued large margins will encourage maximum slaughter for the short week. Boxed beef values continue their decline from the record highs but still reside in a very comfortable area. Recent indications are that the heavy declines are completed and beef values are beginning to stabilize. Packers have busied themselves with captive supply the past two weeks thus open market values have not met expectations of posted beef values. Boxed beef prices closed Thursday at an average of 127.35 down 2.77 from last Friday. Sales of slaughter cattle on a national basis for negotiated cash trades were 128,200 through 2:00 p.m. Thursday. Last weeks full count was light at 135,000 head.

Boost In Wheat Production A Payoff For Ohio Growers

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio is seeing a bumper crop of soft red winter wheat this growing season, topping other wheat-growing, Midwest states in production and acres planted.

According to the Ohio Agricultural Statistics Service, producers are expected to harvest 65.3 million bushels this year, a 30 percent hike from last year's production. Additionally, 960,000 acres of grain are expected to be harvested from the one million acres seeded in the fall 150,000 acres more than what was harvested in 2002. The high production numbers double that of other Midwest states, such as Indiana and Illinois.

Matt Roberts, an Ohio State University Extension agricultural economist, said that the boost in Ohio's wheat production spawned mainly from high wheat prices at planting and last year's poor performance of corn and soybeans because of the drought.

"The simplest driving factor was the fact that a few months to a few weeks before planting began, new crop wheat prices hovered in the $3.50 range. At this time, soybean prices were projected at $5 or lower and corn was just above $2. So on a relative basis, wheat looked like it would be a reasonably profitable crop given a good growing year," said Roberts, an assistant professor with the Department of Agricultural, Environmental, and Development Economics. "Further, one of the advantages of planting wheat is that there is a big cash flow benefit. Ohio had the largest increase in acreage this year than any other Midwest state, and I think it's because farmers, who suffered from last year's drought, were interested in the early cash flow wheat would offer."

Ohio wheat growers weren't the only ones jumping on the production bandwagon. Attractive at-planting prices drove producers in other states to flood the country with wheat. The result was a steady decline in prices from $3.50 in September to $2.80 in March.

"Those farmers who did not lock in their selling price at planting saw their profits whittled away and almost entirely evaporate over the months," said Roberts. "The winter we had nationwide was excellent for wheat, and there was a concern that the country would be awash in the crop." For Ohio wheat growers, however, growing soft red winter wheat, compared to other wheat varieties, has turned out to be profitable.

"The USDA reported that plantings of soft red winter wheat nationwide have been lower than expected," said Roberts. "For Ohio producers, the last two weeks have been very good, since prices have rallied to $3.20 to $3.30 a bushel."

Roberts said favorable wheat prices and high wheat production may continue, albeit temporarily.

"We had large harvests of wheat in the mid-'90s, both nationally and worldwide, and inventories were high. Since that time American production of wheat has declined dramatically. I think Ohio's acreage has been cut two-thirds since 1996," said Roberts. "But now consumption is outstripping production and wheat is a much more competitive commodity. That's where the boost in acreage is coming from and prices may hover in the $3.15 to $3.20 range for a while until that equilibrium is met."

Roberts said that the rise in wheat prices and boost in acreage is almost a necessity to balance consumer demand and declining production.

"If we produced the same amount of wheat this year as we did last year, one can make a realistic scenario where soft red winter wheat comes in tight supply in the coming year," said Roberts. "To counteract that force, prices had to rise and acres had to be planted."

U.S. winter wheat production is forecast at 1.56 million bushels, up 37 percent from last year. Yield is expected to be nearly 43 bushels per acre, almost 4.5 more bushels per acre than last year.

Ag Security Bill Passes House

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Former House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee Chairman Rep. Raymond Bunt's bill to reduce the minimum amount of land needed to be eligible for preservation was unanimously approved by the House.

"Our farmland is rapidly disappearing, turning the Commonwealth's rich soil into over-developed fields of housing, shopping malls, and high-rises," Bunt said. "We are slowly building over our future."

The bill amends the Agricultural Area Security Law by allowing counties the option of making 25 acres the minimum amount of land eligible for preservation. This option provides the opporunity for more farmland to be preserved, since the current regulation requires a minimum of 50 acres, unless the parcel is contiguous to already preserved land.

"We must preserve our valuable farmland to help sustain agriculture and farming practices," Bunt said. "By the General Assembly passing this bill into law, we help ensure the future livelihood of our farmers and agribusiness."

House Bill 671 now goes to the Senate for consideration.

2002 Poultry Production In State Down 14 Percent

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The combined value of Pennsylvania poultry production in 2002 was $596.8 million, down 14 percent from the $690.0 million in 2001, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service.

Egg production accounted for 46.7 percent of the total value, broiler production was 37.8 percent of the total, turkey production accounted for 15.2 percent, and the value of mature chickens sold (excluding broilers) accounted for less than 1 percent of the total value.

Total egg production for 2002 was valued at $279.3 million, down 8 percent from $303.7 million one year earlier. During the year 6.52 billion eggs were produced, 2 percent less than in 2001. Prices for all eggs sold, including hatching eggs, averaged 51.4 cents per dozen during the year, compared to 54.7 cents per dozen in 2001.

Broiler production during 2002 was valued at $225.9 million, down 21 percent from the previous year. A total of 133.2 million broilers were produced in 2002, up slightly from 2001. The average price received by producers in 2002 was 32.0 cents per pound live weight, compared to 41.0 cents per pound received a year earlier.

Turkey producers raised 9.9 million poults during 2002, up 4 percent from the previous year. The value of turkey production in 2002, at $91.1 million, was 7 percent less than in 2001. Producers received an average of 39 cents per pound live weight during the year, down 7 cents per pound from 2001.

Mature chickens sold (excluding broilers) in 2002 were valued at $529,000, 2 percent less than the previous year. A total of 14.7 million mature chickens were sold during the year, 2 percent less than in 2001. Prices for mature chickens averaged 1.0 cent per pound live weight, same as the previous year.

Foregoing Field Tests Could Spell SCN Troubles

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Soybean growers who failed to sample their fields last fall for soybean cyst nematode (SCN) may be in for a surprise this growing season.

Mae Riedel, an Ohio State University plant pathologist, said that snow cover and relatively mild winter temperatures may have aided in SCN survival resulting in high pest populations this spring. Those populations could spell trouble, especially for growers who rushed to plant early and may not have tested their fields for egg counts beforehand.

Soybean cyst nematodes feed on the roots of young plants, which prevents the roots from taking up vital nutrients. The result is a drop in yields and economic losses. The best management tool to control SCN populations is to sample fields with a history of problems and rotate resistant varieties based on relative egg counts.

Yield loss threshold of SCN begins at 200 eggs per cup of soil. At 2,000 eggs per cup of soil, most susceptible soybean varieties suffer significant economic losses. At 5,000 eggs per cup of soil, growers should avoid growing soybean varieties altogether, even resistant varieties.

"With susceptible varieties, when there is stress on the crop or poor nutrition, you can detect economic losses under 1,000 eggs per cup of soil. So at the 10,000 range, susceptible beans are producing very little yield and resistant beans will probably have root damage and won't yield optimally," said Riedel.

One thing that is going for growers so far that may help keep SCN populations in check is recent rains and cool soil temperatures.

"Soybean cyst nematodes don't develop too well in wet soils, and low temperatures, below 65 degrees Fahrenheit, tend to suspend nematode activity," said Riedel. "Such conditions may allow early-planted soybeans to develop roots and start growing before SCN has a chance to pile on."

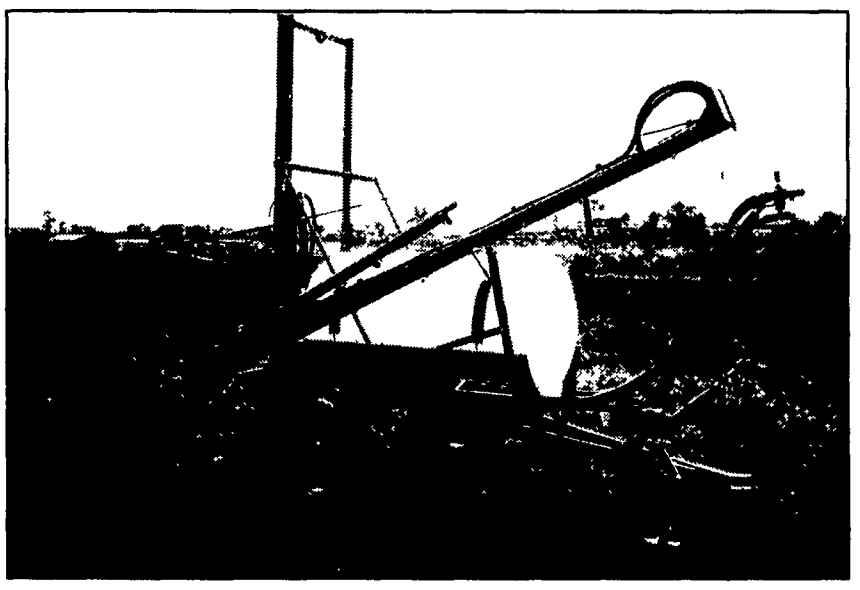
High Pressure Produce Sprayers
Trailer or 3 Pt. Hitch Models



Zimmerman's manufactures several different model sprayers designed for produce spraying. They are built for the small farmer that cannot justify a large expensive sprayer. Trailer models are available with a 200 or 300 gallon tank and 3pt hitch models with a 110, 150, 200 or 300 gallon tank. The 25' single sided boom has 7' plus clearance and requires a minimal amount of drive rows because of the wide span. It also has a hydraulic cylinder that allows the operator to level the boom from the tractor seat. A Hypro high pressure diaphragm provides up to 290 p.s.i. and non-drip nozzle bodies keep chemical loss minimal. Stop or call Zimmerman's today to see how we can help you with your spraying needs and improve your profit margin.

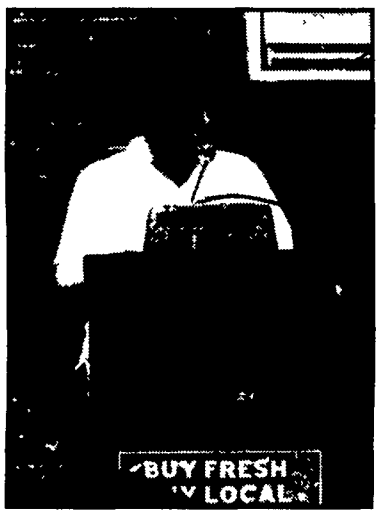
would seem, are yearning to find each other. They are like two highway crews tunneling through a mountain from opposite sides. The mountain in this illustration represents all the complexities of today's marketplace, including issues of processing, transportation, marketing, and government regulation of the food supply chain. What they need in order to succeed is some kind of navigation system to guide their efforts.

Such a navigation system is becoming available in southeast Pennsylvania, with promise for other regions of the state in coming years.

Recently in downtown Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA) and its partners, the Philadelphia Fair Food Project and Farm to City, unveiled a campaign called "Buy Fresh/Buy Local" that will aim to connect farmers and consumers through a network of farmers' markets, restaurants, caterers, and other market venues, focusing specifically on Philadelphia for this first stage of the campaign.



Cheryl Cook, deputy secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, addresses the gathering of local food enthusiasts.

"Philadelphia is an exciting city for food," noted Bridget Croke of the Philadelphia Fair Food Project. "Restaurants participating in the Buy Fresh/Buy Local campaign make special dishes featuring locally raised ingredients. For instance, Django Gypsy Caf serves a delicious Atlantic Bluefish and creamy mushroom polenta made with locally grown black forest mushrooms, and a smoked tomato broth made with locally grown tomatoes and bacon made from locally raised pork."

What is local food? The campaign focuses on Pennsylvania food grown within a 75-mile radius of Philadelphia, reaching as far as the areas around Lancaster, Reading, and Allentown.

"We are blessed to have a tremendous variety of farm-fresh products available from southeastern Pennsylvania," says Bob Pierson, Queen Village resident and manager of Farm to City farmers' markets in seven Philadelphia communities. "The farmers' markets in Philadelphia sell everything from strawberries, tomatoes and sweet corn, to naturally raised beef, aged cheeses, locally made breads, and mouthwatering BBQ chicken and ribs cooked right at the markets."

By next year, staff members at PASA hope to expand this effort to a growing network of market venues throughout the target region, and to make materials available to individual farmers in southeast Pennsylvania who wish to label their products as locally grown. A similar program may be launched to promote farm products in southwestern Pennsylvania by next year as well.

"Our aim is to eventually make sure that consumers anywhere in the commonwealth have a reliable method of identifying farm-fresh products grown in their region by farmers who would welcome their customers to the farm" explained Ruth Sullivan, PASA's director of southeast programs.

In fact, the Buy Fresh/Buy Local Campaign in Pennsylvania is part of an even larger, nationwide Buy Local Initiative organized by FoodRoutes Network (FoodRoutes), a nonprofit organization based in Centre County (Millheim) that provides technical support to community-based groups working to strengthen regional markets for locally grown foods. FoodRoutes provides communications tools, networking opportunities, and information resources to organizations working to rebuild local food systems across the country.

"People everywhere are attracted to this issue regardless of whether they seek out local food for reasons of personal health, support for family farmers, concern for the environment, to strengthen their local economy, or simply because local food tastes better. Food has the power to unite and reconnect people in a way that gives this movement unique potential" said Joani Walsh, program coordinator for FoodRoutes.

A party to celebrate the launch of the southeastern Pennsylvania Buy Fresh/Buy Local campaign was held June 15, Father's Day, at Yard's Brewing Company in Philadelphia and was attended by 130 local food enthusiasts. Fare for the day included a roasted pig from Country Time Pork in Berks County, as well as a variety of other foods, including zucchini and eggs from Green Meadow farm, cheese from Farm Fresh for Chefs (both Lancaster County), and a variety of breads and beverages produced in the southwest region.

A featured speaker attending the event was Cheryl Cook, recently appointed deputy secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA), who brought greetings from Secretary Dennis Wolff. Cook made clear the department's intention to support the promotion of Pennsylvania-grown products on a local basis as a priority in the future. Cook explained PDA's plans to implement a "Pennsylvania Preferred" label that can be used in a complimentary way with other marketing materials more locally based.

With the Buy Fresh/Buy Local campaign, a new era of mutual appreciation and benefit between Pennsylvania family farmers and consumers may indeed have begun.

These two fans of local food seem to express concern for where their next meal is coming from.

Cooperative Extension Gears Up To Assist In Homeland Security

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension is gearing up to assist in the state's homeland security system.

"Cooperative extension is uniquely positioned to respond to emergencies," says David Filson, director of Penn State Cooperative Extension's South Central Region. Filson recently accepted additional duties coordinating the organization's statewide emergency response efforts.

"We have a network of educators around the state, with an office in every county," Filson says. "We also have a communications system — including a statewide computer network and satellite downlink facilities in nearly every county — that gives us the capacity to send and receive information very quickly. But with the added threat of terrorist attacks against our farms, food system and water supplies, we felt the need to enhance our emergency preparedness and response capabilities," he says.

As a result, emergency response contacts have been named in every county extension office and in each of extension's eight regions.

A task force of Penn State faculty and extension specialists also has been assembled to lend expertise in response to a wide variety of potential emergencies.

"Extension is a key partner in local and statewide emergency planning," Filson says. "In the event of a natural or manmade emergency, the county emergency management office would set the wheels in motion.

Relevant state and federal agencies — such as the Pennsylvania and U.S. agriculture departments, the state health department, state emergency management agency, state department of environmental protection, and others — would be contacted.

If the emergency involves an attack or other event that affects the food system, for instance, cooperative extension would be called in quickly to provide information and assist with communication.

"Depending on the need, that information and expertise can cover a range of agricultural and consumer issues, including farm biosecurity, plant and animal health, risk management, food safety and human health, and family and household management," he adds.

Penn State Cooperative Extension also offers a wealth of publications, fact sheets and Web sites that cover a wide variety of emergency-related topics.

In addition, resources are shared and distributed nationwide through the Extension Disaster Education Network, with extension systems at most land-grant universities participating.

Meanwhile, Filson will be overseeing disaster-related training and coordination for Penn State Cooperative Extension so that staff throughout the organization understand their roles and are ready to respond if and when they are needed.

Holstein Convention A Success

Lad Hastings, Tulare, Calif., was the recipient of the Robert Rumler Scholarship. He is obtaining a master's degree in business administration from the University of Phoenix in Fresno, Calif.

Special Friend Awards of Holstein Association USA were presented to Holstein Canada and the Holstein Association of Mexico.

John M. Meyer, CEO, gave a brief synopsis of a successful year for the association and the Holstein cow. The association had a financial improvement of more than $4.1 million in 2002, indicating a continued interest in the programs and services provided by Holstein Association USA.

"Last year, revenues grew by over 3 percent and operating costs were reduced by 8 percent, which accounted for the much-improved year," Meyer said. "The implementation of our Management-By-Objective Business Plan was a key component in the improvement made last year."

Meyer emphasized the success of the Holstein Complete program, a new package of services offered by Holstein Association USA, which was embraced beyond expectations by the membership.

Delegates elected Tom Nunes, Santa Rosa, Calif., to serve as president of the association's 12-member board of directors. Randolph Gross, Valleyford, Wash., completed his second term as director, and was voted to the position of vice president of the organization.

Additional election results included Glen E. Brown, Coalville, Utah, for a three-year term as director in region VIII; Elmo Wendorf Jr., Ixonia, Wis., re-elected in region V; and Marvin L. Nunes, Windsor, Calif., re-elected in region IX. Wendorf and Nunes will serve three-year terms. Thomas L. Thorbahn, Vickery, Ohio, was elected director-at-large.

Retiring directors include Henry J. Beneke, Millerton, N.Y.; C. Rayford Bennett, Madison, Ga.; and James A. Spreng, Bucyrus, Ohio. Joann F. Hartman, Waterloo, Ill. finished 12 years of service on the board of directors, most recently on a two-year term as president.

Bylaw amendment proposals included the enrollment of animals with non-Holstein genetics into the Holstein herdbook. This amendment was tabled for further consideration next year after a review of the board of directors and Holstein Association USA staff.

A second bylaw amendment was split by the delegates, and voted on as two proposals. The first part, which passed, resulted in the requirement that a director must be a member in good standing with the association. The second half, requiring the vice president to have previously served on the board of directors, did not gain the majority support by the delegate body.

Two resolutions were passed on to the board of directors. The first resolution recognized the importance of milk marketing to the membership during this depressed time of low milk prices. The second resolution related to the responsibility of Holstein Association USA in regard to National Show Ethics.

Ag Progress Days Aug. 19-21

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Ag Progress Days, Pennsylvania's largest outdoor agricultural exposition, will return for its annual three-day run, Aug. 19-21.

Sponsored by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, the event is conducted at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rockspring, nine miles southwest of State College.

Special exhibits, with the theme "Seeing the Forest for the Trees," will showcase research and educational programs to develop and maintain healthy tree species, promote better woodlot management, and support a vigorous forest products industry. Majors and careers in forest resources also will be highlighted.

"We strive to plan an event that reflects the diversity of the college's programs," said Bob Oberheim, Ag Progress Days manager. "Our themed exhibits, combined with many of the traditional activities that we offer each year, ensure that virtually anyone can find something of interest at Ag Progress Days."

More than 350 commercial exhibitors will display the latest goods and services. Interactive displays, guided tours, and workshops will show how research and educational programs are addressing important issues, safeguarding our food supply and the environment, and helping to improve the efficiency and profitability of agriculture and related industries.

Faculty and extension staff from the college will be on hand to answer questions and provide information on crops and soils; dairy, livestock, and equine production; conservation practices; integrated pest management; woodlot management; farm safety; and home gardening and lawn care.

Other activities planned for this year's event include a skid steer rodeo and several new tours, including a tour of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's new Animal Evaluation Laboratory, which recently was completed near the Ag Progress Days site.

Field demonstrations will feature hay mowing, hay rakes and tedders, baling, bale handling, conservation tillage, and manure application to reduce odor and preserve residue cover.

Also planned are family living exhibits and demonstrations; a corn maze; cut flower beds and exhibits; storytelling; an equine program, including special American Quarter Horse Association exhibitions; live animal displays; a tree-climbing adventure; a museum of antique farm and home implements; and a wide variety of food booths.

Ag Progress Days hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Aug. 19, 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Aug. 20, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Aug. 21. Admission and parking are free.

Plans for Pennsylvania

HON. DENNIS C. WOLFF

mains strong, and the future promises to be even brighter.

Much of the credit goes to those who live and work on the 59,000 farms throughout the commonwealth. In addition, our government is working for us as never before. Governor Ed Rendell's Plan for a New Pennsylvania includes measures to lower property taxes for rural Pennsylvanians, to provide our children with a better understanding of agriculture's importance in our lives, and financial incentives for farmers to expand or improve their operations.

As a dairy farmer, I understand the problems facing agriculture. I have struggled to pay taxes, winced over low milk prices, and wondered when the rain was going to stop. As the secretary of agriculture, I am working for solutions to our collective challenges. Just as farmers benefit from the experiences of past generations, I too will build on the work that has been done.

The Plan for a New Pennsylvania focuses on two primary goals of the Department of Agriculture - education and economic development.

Agricultural education should target both the farming and non-farming community. We want to encourage greater interest and participation in agriculture and foster a better understanding of the realities and challenges of the industry.

The key here is starting early — with our children — so that future generations of agriculturists are not hampered by the policies of the uninformed. Ignorance is costly for agriculture. We will work with schools to enhance awareness of school-aged children about the importance of agriculture for the economy, community, and life.

At the same time, we need to foster local government education. Local ordinances threaten to cripple the agriculture industry. I will work to educate government officials about environmental advancements in the agriculture industry and the many ways agriculture contributes to a healthy lifestyle. Local ordinances not only discriminate against farm size, they impact every agricultural enterprise. As I have stated before, the Rendell Administration will support all farms, regardless of size — small, medium, and large. My goal is to ensure that the 12 million citizens of Pennsylvania continue to enjoy the bounty of agriculture.

As farmers know, there is serious concern about the state of the agricultural economy. Our focus on economic development aims to increase agricultural investment and enhance profitability. Gov. Rendell recognizes that agriculture is a business. In his Plan for a New Pennsylvania, $100 million is available for Small Business First Program and the Machinery and Equipment Loan (MELF) Program. This is the largest single investment in economic development ever proposed for agriculture.

In addition, the Department of Agriculture will continue to work with the USDA to expand risk management products like crop insurance to protect our farmers. We also need to make sure that environmental, local, and state laws recognize the importance and uniqueness of agriculture.

For as long as I can remember, Pennsylvania farmers have paid a disproportionate share of property taxes. The Plan for a New Pennsylvania will help to address this problem by reducing them by as much as 30 percent in the first year alone. This is a great first step.

This is just the beginning of what I want to accomplish in the next four years. If we can provide agriculture the right tools to prosper, then agriculture will grow and we all know that growing is something that agriculture does very well.

I welcome suggestions from the agriculture community. Our collective challenge is to keep agriculture vibrant and profitable. That will require teamwork and the support of the agricultural industry and all levels of government. Together we can make the future of Pennsylvania agriculture bright. I look forward to working with you.

FARMING On The Edge

By George DeVault

REPORTERS TO THE RESCUE
Or, How The News Media Can Help Your Marketing

In 1999, a newspaper story gave our business a boost. It was another drought year. By late July it was so dry that the headline in the Allentown Morning Call read "Barren fields, broken dreams." Crop losses in Lehigh County were already estimated at 75 percent. Stunted corn in a photo looked like pineapple.

"Farmers seeking emergency assistance," another headline said. "Most counties in the region face huge losses in corn and other crops because of drought."

Consumers took the dire news to heart. "Where have all the customers gone?" asked a Morning Call headline on Aug. 18. "Farmers' roadside stands are lined with fruits and vegetables, but shoppers are in short supply."

The author was Food Editor Diane Stoneback. My wife, Melanie, knew Diane from when Melanie was a reporter at the Call a few years earlier. So I didn't feel too awkward calling Diane to compliment her on her article — and to suggest another one.

"You know, Diane, there is some good news in farming this summer, despite the drought," I said. Then I explained our weekly vegetable subscription service. Customers pay in advance — months before the start of the season — for 20 weeks of veggies.

George DeVault

That provides operating cash, so that the farmers don't have to go to the bank for a loan. The farmers, in turn, keep planting a little of a lot of different crops (141 different varieties of 40 different vegetables that year), and drip irrigate everything. That provides a steady supply of greens, root crops, herbs, berries, cut flowers and staples like carrots and tomatoes.

"And our customers are amazing," I told her. "When they come out to the farm to pick up their weekly bags, they ask, almost with tears in their eyes, 'Are you guys OK in this weather? Do you want to just keep the money, forget about the veggies, and try again next year?'"

Diane was intrigued. She had heard about vegetable subscription services before, and said she meant to write about one sometime. What really caught her interest, I think, was the good news angle of the story.

Early the the next week she came out to the farm with a photographer for a few hours. We showed her all around the greenhouses and fields, explained our irrigation system and gave her copies of our newsletter.

Then she asked if she could interview some of our customers. Sure, why not? We gave her the phone numbers of half a dozen people from around the area. Here is a sampling of what they told Diane:

"Before we completely unpacked our first bag of produce, we ate every one of the raw sugar snap peas it contained," said Sharon Sanders, a veteran food writer and cookbook author . "I know how food should taste because I grew up on a farm in west central Pennsylvania . I've also lived in Italy, where luscious vegetables seem even more important than pasta.

"We've been amazed at the great foods we've gotten from our subscription in such a rotten year. The sweet corn was remarkably sweet and tender and full of milk.

"We look forward to the weekly newsletter and recipes from the farm as much as the produce. My husband says it makes him appreciate what has gone into the tomato he is eating. It's a connection we have to real people and a real place — something that's not often found today."

"I had never seen a blooming flower on sage, used garlic greens or tried preparing edamame (edible soybeans still in their fuzzy pods) from scratch," said Regina Ragone, food editor of Rodale's Prevention magazine. She had also been test kitchen director for Ladies Home Journal and food editor for Weight Watchers magazine. Each Thursday, she stopped at the farm to pick up her vegetables before commuting to her apartment in Brooklyn.

"I love going to the farm. Seeing George and Melanie at work is like looking at a living Norman Rockwell (painting). The day they were packing heirloom tomatoes in all colors and sizes, the tomatoes looked like jewels. Seeing food in that pristine condition and where it is grown excites me."

"Sign up for succulence," was the headline on Diane's story in the Sept. 1 Morning Call. "Subscribe to good health with food from the farm."

That morning, our telephone started ringing non-stop. People from all over the Lehigh Valley wanted to sign up for succulence.

There was just one problem. They couldn't subscribe then. We were sold out. The season was almost over. We had only planted enough for the people who signed up last spring.

"But we'd be happy to add you to our waiting list for next year," we told callers.

"Yes! Please put me on the list," everyone said.

We did. And early the next year when our annual subscription flier went into the mail, the people from the waiting list were among the very first to send us checks. They wanted to make sure they didn't miss out this time around.

One thing more and more people want these days is farm-fresh food. That's why Diane's story is still generating sales for us, nearly four years after it appeared in print.

Editor's Note: With his wife and 25-year-old son, George DeVault raises certified organic vegetables near Emmaus. He is a Food and Society Policy Fellow with the Institute for Agriculture and Trade Policy in a program funded by the Kellogg Foundation. The DeVaults' articles on diversification, high-value crops, greenhouse growing, and cut flowers are available on the Rodale Institute's new Website, www.newfarm.org.

How To Make — And Keep — Good Media Relations

George DeVault

There is a very fine line between a strictly commercial message and a public interest article.

Knowing — and respecting — that line means the difference between getting a lot of good, free publicity or being told, "Buy an ad, buddy!" Case in point is the article "Jewels in the field" that ran June 28 in the Allentown Morning Call. "Despite extreme weather, strawberries are still good for picking. But not for much longer," warned the subhead.

Notice the difference? Weather for strawberries has been lousy this spring, yet Lehigh County strawberry growers still have lots of ripe berries to be picked. That's the good news. Bad news is the berries won't be around much longer. Either way, it's news.

Whenever you have something unusual happening on your farm, local newspaper and radio and TV reporters want to hear about it. The catch is they usually won't know about it unless you tell them. That means picking up the telephone or sending a quick e-mail message.

Who do you contact? Ask for the farm reporter first. If no one is assigned to the farm beat, try the the food editor or a general assignment reporter. Keep an eye or an ear out for whoever does the most and the best farm stories.

Don't forget the photo department. Newspaper and TV photographers are always looking for colorful feature photo opportunities. Changing seasons on the farm present limitless possibilities, from the birth of the first spring lambs, a field of ripe orange pumpkins, or a one-horse open sleigh cutting through newfallen snow.

For less timely items on daily newspapers, contact the editor in charge of the editorials. Letters to the editor should be simple — and civil. Limit yourself to just three concise paragraphs and your chances of getting published will improve tremendously. For longer, more complex subjects consider an op/ed piece that usually runs opposite the regular editorials in dailies. Just be sure to check out the newspaper's guidelines for style and length first.

Once reporters and editors get to know you, chances are they will call you the next time they need a comment on the weather, progress of crops, or government farm policy.

Cornell's Small Farm Program Sponsoring Quarterly Magazine

ITHACA, N.Y. — Cornell's Small Farm Program has begun preparation of the premier issue of its new magazine, the Small Farms Quarterly (SFQ) for distribution at Empire Farm Days.

According to Joanna Green of the program's staff: "SFQ is a celebration of what farming is all about. And farming is about a lot of different things to a lot of different people. Whether your interest is in specialized production, diversification, maximizing profits, or family values — whether your viewpoint is one of a producer, a homemaker, a parent, a grandparent, or a young person — we think you'll find inspiration, encouragement and valuable information in this and future issues of Small Farm Quarterly."

The Quarterly is sponsored by Cornell's Small Farms Program and PRO-DAIRY/CCE NWNY Dairy, Livestock and Field Crops Program.

Pre-Conditioned Calf Sale Meeting Set

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — Middleburg Auction and Penn State Extension are sponsoring a meeting Monday, July 7 at 7 p.m. to discuss the Livestock Marketing Association Vaccinated and Certified Calves (LMA-VACC) pre-conditioned calf program. The meeting will take place at Penn State's Bradford County Extension Office in Towanda.

The pre-conditioned calf sale is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 8 at 1 p.m. at the Middleburg Auction in Snyder County. It is open to producers who agree to follow the pre-conditioning protocol with required vaccinations and boosters, parasite control, and weaning at least 30 days ahead of the sale.

Pre-conditioned calves often sell at a premium because of lower rates of morbidity and mortality after being placed in a feedlot.

For more information on the LMA-VACC pre-conditioning program or the July 7 meeting, call Dave Hartman, Penn State extension agent at (570) 784-6660 or Bill Weist at the Middleburg Auction at (570) 784-6660.

Twilight Tomato Meeting Set

HOLTWOOD (Lancaster Co.) — A twilight meeting at Steve Groff's Cedar Meadow Farm in Holtwood is scheduled for Wednesday, July 9 at 6 p.m.

Visitors will have a chance to see Groff's system of growing tomatoes under Haygrove tunnels. For more information, call 877-HAYGROVE.

Field Day For New Marketing Ideas

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Growers are always looking for new ideas in the marketplace, whether it is a different crop mix or a way to draw the consumer to the farm.

In order to expose central Pennsylvania growers to some new ideas, a field day is scheduled at the Penn State Horticulture Research Farm at Rockspring on July 23 at 5 p.m.

One new crop idea to look at is a sweet Spanish onions. In addition to production aspects of onion production, the field day will also look at several sweet Spanish onion varieties.

Evaluation will also be done on the variety Candy and how well this performs as greenhouse grown tray plants, field grown bare root transplants, and sets. There is a cooperative effort between Penn State University, Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture in creating a name brand onion for Pennsylvania.

The Pennsylvania Simply Sweet® Onion is a branded onion, licensed through the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association. It has been marketed locally as a branded onion in Washington County, Harrisburg, and Philadelphia retail stores. The onion is produced in Pennsylvania under a set of production and grading standards that result in a very high quality, large, sweet, non-pungent onion. It is marketed in August and September, during a period of low competition from other branded sweet onions grown in other states or other countries. Several acres were grown in southwestern Pennsylvania and the demand for these Pennsylvania onions was greater than the supply.

Is the demand great enough for additional growers? Can local central Pennsylvania growers meet this demand? Come on out to the field day and see if there is an opportunity for you.

High tunnels will be highlighted after the sweet Spanish onion trial. According to Penn State's Center for Plasticulture, high tunnels encompass a crop growing system that fits somewhere between row covers and greenhouses. High tunnels are relatively inexpensive permitting entry into crop production with limited capital. This system is particularly appealing to new-entry growers who utilize retail-marketing channels.

High tunnels are not conventional greenhouses. But like plastic-covered greenhouses, they are generally quonset-shaped, constructed of metal bows that are attached to metal posts which have been driven into the ground about two feet deep. They are covered with one layer of 6-mil greenhouse-grade polyethylene, and are ventilated by manually rolling up the sides each morning and rolling them down in early evening. There is no permanent heating system although it is advisable to have a standby portable propane unit to protect against unexpected below-freezing temperatures. There are no electrical connections. The only external connection is a water supply for trickle irrigation.

The tour will highlight some crops that can be successfully grown in this system. For additional information and/or directions, call Tom Butzler at (570) 726-0022. Refreshments will be provided.

Commodities Represented At COOL

animals to place of birth. Sessions told the apparently disgruntled cattle feeders in February that "I am only the messenger." He was only trying to alert them of the law's provisions.

Four months later, Sessions was back to hear more comments about COOL but in a more controlled setting to hear from most of the commodity groups and businesses, not just cattle feeders, affected by COOL law.

Out of the 45 persons who had signed up to speak, 36 actually offered testimony. The presenters spoke in the order in which they had signed in.

The 30th speaker stole the show. After hearing speaker after speaker offering programmed opposition, Garfield Frieze began to talk straight from his heart. Frieze said, "I am just a poor farmer and I don't know a lot about this... but they said they are going to take everything away from us. We farmers are the little boys and they will rob us to death."

Frieze said, "I do think we should have some way of going for country of origin labeling, but if it's going to take everything away from us, I say don't do it. Farmers are hurt enough. Two of us came up from Virginia — came 400 miles just to see you people — to tell you we don't make enough. We have nobody to pass (potential costs of the program) on to. But the big packers and all the big boys and all the manufacturers can take it from us and keep it for themselves.... I thank you for hearing from us and think about the poor farmer."

When asked by Sessions to repeat his name, Frieze said, "My name is Garfield Frieze and I am a poor farmer."

After weeklong showers cleared and weather improved, many area growers and producers were too busy in the fields to attend the listening session. For those who couldn't attend the session, all of the testimony at the 12 listening sessions, both spoken and written, is on the Web at www.ams.usda.gov/cool. Click on Transcripts from Informational Sessions.

Fourteen people noted that the COOL legislation should be repealed. They included supermarket operators, food manufacturers, and food marketers. Five cattle producers also spoke, four in favor and one opposed. Those in favor included a New York State senator who is a chairman of an agriculture committee, a Lancaster County Angus breeder, a Virginia cattleman who also spoke for R-Calf Inc., and a cattleman from Virginia. A cattleman from Ohio, also speaking on behalf of the Ohio Cattlemen's Association, was opposed to mandatory labeling.

A sheep producer, who also represented the American Sheep Industry Association, was in favor of labeling American Lamb. One independent pork producer opposed the legislation. There were three meat packing firms represented by six speakers and all opposed COOL.

Three meat packing/processors associations represented by four speakers all opposed.

Two speakers represented farm organizations who stressed the growers, producers, and consumer need for country of origin labeling. One speaker represented a Pennsylvania consumer coalition in favor of labeling.

One agribusiness association representing swine interests was opposed.

A beef specialist from Ohio State University cited problems with the mandatory law and made some recommendations about identifying cattle.

Getting this session off to a good start in support of COOL was Sen. Nancy Lorraine Hoffman who said she was a 10-term senator from New York State, chairman of the agriculture committee for five years, who raises cattle on a small farm South of Syracuse, and is a member of the National Cattlemen's Association and the American National Cattle Women's Association (ANCWA). Hoffman said she was in favor of clear labeling for consumer choice. She said the groundwork was already in place for the legislation in Section 304, Tariff Act of 1930 and also in the Meat Inspection Act for the consumer's right to know what is in the package. She said there is overwhelming support for this legislation and talked at length about consumer choice and the NCBA's stance in favor of voluntary labeling.

Other notable speakers in favor were Larry Breech, president of the Pennsylvania Farmers Union, and Guy Donaldson, president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

Prior to the afternoon session, The American Meat Institute hosted a media session earlier in the day to explain their position.

"We farmers are the little boys and they will rob us to death.

I do think we should have some way of going for country of origin labeling, but if it's going to take everything away from us, I say don't do it.... We have nobody to pass (potential costs of the program) on to. The big packers and all the big boys and all the manufacturers can take it from us and keep it for themselves."

Gene Mapping To Pave Way For Crop Improvements

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — National Science Foundation Director Dr. Rita Colwell said recently that international cooperation in emerging genomics research will play a central role in ending hunger and promoting sustainable agriculture during a keynote address at the Ministerial Conference and Expo on Agricultural Science and Technolog.

"If we are serious about making hunger and famine a thing of the past, we must use every tool we can develop," said Colwell. "Plant genomics is a tool that holds fantastic potential to contribute to the well-being of humanity and to the planet we call home."

Genomics research into plant genetics has enabled scientists to engineer crops that are salt tolerant or drought resistant, while current research is examining how to develop foods that are nutritionally advanced. Colwell highlighted the significant developments over the past two decades that have opened new doors of exploration to scientists seeking methods to improve the nutrition and health of the world's population and the sustainability of the environment. These developments include:

- The first ever completely sequenced plant genome of the mustard weed Arabidopsis in December 2000, whose genetic information now serves as the guide for mapping 125,000 other plant species;
- the completion of a deep draft (99 percent complete) sequence of the rice genome by an international consortium of scientists including USDA in December 2002;
- the discovery of new methods to sequence the complex maize genome; and
- the identification and isolation of resistance genes for the potato late blight disease.

NFU Supports Proposed Market Access Act

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union President Dave Frederickson publicly commended Sen. Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa, and Reps. Dave Camp, R-Mich., and Earl Pomeroy, D-N.D., for introducing legislation to address unfair foreign barriers to U.S. agricultural exports.

During a Capitol Hill news conference last week, Frederickson joined Grassley and Camp as they unveiled the U.S. Agricultural Products Market Access Act of 2003, which creates a "Special 301" procedure within U.S. trade laws.

Under this provision, the U.S. Trade Representative would be required to determine if trade practices of other nations deny fair and equitable access to the United States. If the USTR identifies that a country is significantly and negatively impacting U.S. trade, the legislation would require the USTR to initiate corrective actions.

"NFU is a long-time supporter of maintaining and improving our domestic trade laws as a viable mechanism to ensure fair and competitive markets," Frederickson said. "We believe the legislation sponsored by Senator Grassley and Congressmen Camp and Pomeroy represents a positive step forward in ensuring greater fairness in international agricultural trade."

Frederickson explained that under current law, the USTR has discretion to take action and industry groups must devote significant time and resources to file petitions with the trade representative to initiate an investigation.

PIT POWER

Farmers and composters - Here is a breakdown for compost and manure pits and manure piles! Pit Power is bacteria and bacteria feeders that break down solids in manure pits and septic tanks and breakdown compost faster.

Clean out your pit with ease, use Pit Power! One gallon of Pit Power per 10,000 to 20,000 gal of pit volume Should be repeated approx 2 times a year! If aeration of the pit is possible, it will help the bacteria to grow and work faster to break down solids Pit Power's purpose is to add life (bacteria) in the manure, which then is returned to the soil where a bacteria is working. The smell of pit manure is not so strong Pit Power is a non-toxic product - Life to Feed Life!

OPINION

of social and political union among us. Again, if happiness is our being's end and aim, our fairs contribute much to that end and aim, as occasions of recreation, as holidays.

Constituted as man is, he has positive need of occasional recreation, and whatever can give him this, associated with virtue and advantage, and free from vice and disadvantage, is a positive good. Such recreation our fairs afford. They are a present pleasure, to be followed by no pain as a consequence; they are a present pleasure, making the future more pleasant.

But the chief use of agricultural fairs is to aid in improving the great calling of agriculture in all its departments and minute divisions; to make mutual exchange of agricultural discovery, information, and knowledge, so that, at the end, all may know everything which may have been known to but one, or but few, at the beginning, and to bring together especially all which is supposed to be not generally known because of recent discovery or invention.

And not only to bring together and to impart all which has been accidentally discovered and invented upon ordinary motive, but by exciting emulation for premiums, and for the pride and honor of success — of triumph, in some sort — to stimulate that discovery and invention into extraordinary activity.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

look. Your guess is as good as mine. But, if the market did factor this into their September/ October prices and the plan is not approved by NMPF on Monday, June 30, than expect Class III futures to suffer.

So, what should you do? My expectation is that a Class III price of $13 for the fall months is fairly optimistic. I'm expecting a Class III peak of $11-12. This assumes nothing about the CWT plan — expect higher prices if the plan is adopted and is effective. I'm assuming that imports of dairy products will continue since world prices are still fairly weak, the U.S. economy is still struggling, and there is no clear evidence that yield per cow will suffer the rest of this year. That said, I have been known to be wrong about my milk price forecasts!

So here is what I'd suggest dairy farmers consider. A Class III price of $13 is pretty good, especially if you add in your basis. In Pennsylvania, most of our producers would add $2.50 per CWT for basis. Consider locking in a portion of your fall milk marketings, say 20-40 percent per month, depending on your risk preferences. That way, if the CWT plan is adopted and Class III milk prices jump to $14-$15 per CWT, you will make more money on the 60-80 percent of your marketings that were not protected. On the other hand, if my pessimistic forecast is right and Class III prices only rise to $11-$12 per CWT by the fall, you have some protection.

And now for my weather forecast! Expect hot and humid weather, or cool and dry weather, or somewhere in between, for some, or most, or all of the remainder of the summer. I could be more specific, but it really depends!

Quality hay production is the focus of the July 12 edition of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council's Foraging Around newsletter in Lancaster Farming. Also scheduled: Project Grass youth contest coverage, conservation updates, reports on forage preservation, and a calendar of events.

Co-Winners For Excellence In Conservation Award Named

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) recently presented its 2003 Excellence in Conservation Award to Dr. Bernard Sweeney, president and senior research scientist at the Stroud Water Research Center in Pennsylvania, and Robert Boettcher, a Montana farmer.

"We received nominations from across the country. These individuals were selected for their outstanding efforts to conserve, maintain and improve the natural resources and environment on America's private lands," said NRCS Chief Bruce Knight.

Sweeney directs a staff of 65 scientists, technicians and college interns at the Stroud Water Research Center.

The Center is recognized nationally and internationally for its research on the structure and function of both natural and disturbed streams throughout the Western Hemisphere, with laboratories in Avondale, and Costa Rica.

Natural stream water from White Clay Creek at Avondale has been supplied to indoor streams at the Center for the past 35 years to provide unique research opportunities. The Center has one of the largest and long-term (30-plus years) research efforts in the world regarding how riparian forest buffers can improve habitat and water quality of streams and rivers.

Sweeney and staff currently are performing a multi-year study to assess the sources and impact of point and nonpoint pollution in all the streams and rivers providing drinking water to New York City.

The Center also has ongoing work on some of the largest rivers in the country (Mississippi, Hudson, Savannah, Susquehanna, Flint and Schuylkill).

Under Sweeney's leadership, the Center shares high-level research to develop practical field applications and educates 4,000 to 5,000 middle and high school students each year with hands-on conservation programs.

Boettcher has been instrumental in using sustainable agriculture practices and is well-known throughout Montana for his conservation accomplishments.

NRCS initiated the Excellence in Conservation Award last year to recognize the voluntary contributions of nongovernmental individuals and groups to the conservation effort in such areas as technical assistance and other types of program delivery, technology transfer, outreach or communications. Any nongovernmental individual group, tribe or organization is eligible.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) recently presented its 2003 Excellence in Conservation Award to Dr. Bernard Sweeney, president and senior research scientist at the Stroud Water Research Center.

Sweeney and Boettcher were recognized during the second annual Excellence in Conservation Award ceremony at the USDA complex in Washington, D.C.

importers are demanding assurances that U.S. beef products are born, raised, and processed in the U.S. Any weakening of the mandatory country-of-origin law at this time may jeopardize both our domestic and foreign markets for meat products.

Mandatory country-of-origin labeling would help reassure consumers and those that import our products by differentiating our domestic products from countries that may have disease or food safety concerns. It's about educating consumers and providing opportunities for producers to promote their high quality products.

Milk Prices Improve

- Cheese gains $0.10/pound in one day.
- Class III futures top $13/ CWT.
- New Penn State study on imports released.

Finally, there is some good news for hard working dairy farm families. The price of cheese and Class III futures in Chicago has shown some real strength. Blocks closed at $1.4150 per pound on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange on July 1. There were 23 bids to sell cheese before two loads were sold. Barrel cheese closed at $1.39 per pound the same day.

Strength in the cheese price will result in real gains in farmgate milk prices. The July Class III futures price settled at $11.70 per CWT on July 1. So farmers will likely see actual Class III prices rise almost $2 per CWT from June to July. Remember, the milk check you receive on July 15 will still reflect the low June prices. Class III futures are expected to peak at $13.19 per CWT by September.

So why are milk prices rising? Well, this was a big surprise to me, but I can take a stab at it. First, USDA's Milk Production report clearly showed that milk cows and productivity were declining. It wasn't much, but the direction was clear. Second, traders in Chicago likely woke up one day and realized it was July and that the weather would soon be getting hot. That makes for less components and lower cheese and butter production. So processors wanted to avoid potentially higher future prices.

Again, a good risk management strategy would be for dairy producers to consider locking in a portion of their summer and fall milk production at these favorable prices. I would look at say 20-30 percent of milk marketings for August through December. If prices get much higher, you'll make money on both the portion you locked in and on the portion you gambled with.

In other news, I just released a Penn State study on dairy imports. I did a lot of calculations and made a bunch of assumptions. The bottom line is I accounted for the impact of imports on supply and demand.

The study shows that imports were significant over the period 1997-2002, particularly imports that contained protein. Protein imports rose 30 percent over this time period. Buy itself this figure is meaningless. What is more significant is that protein imports accounted for 6.5-8 percent of domestic protein consumption. That is above the 5 percent market access figure I had expected from our WTO trade agreement.

Imports, however, did not explain all of the volatility in milk prices. The fundamental problem in the U.S. is that domestic use has been surprisingly flat over the period 1997-2002. Domestic use for protein and other dairy solids rose an average 0.9 and 0.5 percent per year, respectively. That's not much. It was better for milkfat, which increased an average 1.6 percent a year. But milk production rose an average 1.5 percent a year.

Where did this difference go? Well, to Uncle Sam. Excess protein and other dairy solids increasingly went into government storage programs under the Dairy Price Support Program. As of this writing, there are 1.33 billion pounds of nonfat dry milk in government storage.

This study confirms two things. First, imports are significant and should be monitored by the U.S. dairy industry. This study proposes a method of how to do this. This is particularly important as we negotiate the Doha Round of the WTO and discuss a bilateral free trade agreement with Australia. Second, we cannot continue to operate the Dairy Price Support Program as we are doing. Building more dairy farms and bigger dryers is simply not sustainable unless there is a growing commercial market for these dairy solids.

The U.S. dairy industry has in effect surrendered a small but growing portion of the U.S. protein market to importers who are willing to sell food processors a high quality protein product (with no lactose) in the form of MPC and casein. These products are not made here in the U.S. because it is easier (less risky) for U.S. processors to simply make nonfat dry milk and sell it to USDA. Instead of processing a product nobody wants, we should focus instead on developing a domestic processing industry for these protein products here in the U.S. That will involve changing the way we support family farms.

Study Looks At Ag Contributions To Ohio Economy

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio's food and agriculture-related cluster contributed $79.6 billion to the state's economic output in 2000, according to a recent Ohio State University research report. The food and ag-related cluster also provided 15 percent of Ohio's employment and 9 percent of total Ohio income.

Contributions for the report are based on the "Food and Related Agricultural Cluster." The cluster consists of five categories: farm inputs and machinery; farming; processing; food and forestry wholesale/retail; and food services. The report highlights these areas and tracks the output of each industry throughout the complex economy.

The dollar amounts of the ag cluster change each year, but the percentage of contribution to the state's economy changes very slowly, said Tom Sporleder, an agricultural economist and the report's researcher. This is because the Ohio Food model (OHFOOD) is based on structural underlying relationships in the economy, he said.

Ohio's gross state product (GSP) is a frequently used measure of economic activity, said Sporleder, who also is a professor and farm income enhancement endowed chair in the Department of Agricultural, Environmental, and Development Economics. The food and ag cluster contributed $36.5 billion, or 10 percent, to Ohio's gross state product for 2000.

"GSP looks solely at the end product when all the value has been added," Sporleder said. "It is a common metric used for measuring economic activity."

The new report indicated a growth in nursery and horticulture industries and a decrease in livestock production. These changes illustrate the urban trends common to Ohio, Sporleder said.

The nursery and horticulture industry now accounts for about 42 percent of ag production, contributing about $1 billion to the gross state product. This is compared to 23 percent of ag production in 1995.

The entire food and agriculture complex accounted for over 1 million jobs in Ohio in 2000, or about one of every seven jobs. Employment within the cluster comes primarily from the food services sector and the food and forestry wholesale/retail sector. These sectors employed just under 720,000 Ohioans in 2000. This accounts for 79 percent of those employed by the ag cluster and 10 percent of Ohio's overall employment.

Significant employment is expected from these areas, Sporleder said. Food services and food and forestry sales sectors are labor-intensive, dealing more with final consumers and services.

"The food and ag-related cluster contributes roughly $1 in every $10 of the gross state product, which is a substantial contribution," Sporleder said. "It also contributes 15 percent of the total employment-essentially one out of every seven jobs. This shows that the food and agriculture-related cluster continues to be a vital and vibrant part of the state's economy. The results also show that the food processing sector continues to play an important role in Ohio's economy."

Animal Health Funding Benefits

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Provisions in the FY03 supplemental military spending bill approved recently will enhance homeland security efforts and provide desperately-needed funding for improvements to the U.S. animal health infrastructure, according to the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA).

The provision allocates $110 million for the National Animal Disease Center (NADC), National Veterinary Services Laboratory (NVSL), and Center for Veterinary Biologics in Ames, Iowa. The measure passed in the Senate April 11, and in the House April 12.

"The NADC and NVSL lead valuable research efforts and monitor for animal diseases.

Bunt Praises Farmers' Anti-Bioterrorism Efforts

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Chairman of the House Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee Rep. Raymond Bunt (R-Montgomery) gave a thumbs up to the Commonwealth's agricultural industry as members have taken added steps to protect the state's livestock and crops.

"Signs of bioterrorism can come in many forms," Bunt said. "By farmers and agricultural workers educating themselves about dangers and preventative measures, we are saving time, money and a possible disaster if an act of terror should occur here in Pennsylvania."

Farmers are changing their farming practices by tightening how livestock graze, placing new animals in quarantine, wearing disposable boots, using correct handling procedures and quality assurance methods, and placing locks on buildings that house animals.

Members of the dairy industry have introduced a new safety procedure that allows milk tanker drivers to attach a tamper-resistant plastic seal with a number on the top of the tanker opening. The driver then writes the number in the manifest, and delivers the load to the processing plant. There, workers check the seals and compare corresponding numbers. Busted seals or mismatched numbers could result in the entire load of milk being discarded.

"These safety seals are an excellent form of protection, and they don't hinder or slow drivers from completing scheduled stops," Bunt said. "This is a low-cost way to protect consumers and the dairy industry."

Bunt said consumers would not see any increase in costs for the new safety measure at their local grocery store. The Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative made the switch to protective seals two months after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Regional officials from agriculture, emergency planning and other agencies have been working hard since before Sept. 11 to prepare for deadly outbreaks such as foot-and-mouth disease.

Agencies and organizations including veterinarians, state police, the Pennsylvania Game Commission, county extension officers, the Pennsylvania Emergency Management Agency (PEMA) and Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, as well as representatives from the Federal Emergency Agency (FEMA) and the United States Department of Agriculture, have been meeting regularly to discuss what actions and safety measures should be implemented to protect our nation's agricultural security.

Since the terrorist attacks, these agencies have met periodically to expand their focus to include more foreign animal diseases, bioterrorism and other agricultural issues.

Some ways to prevent or control disease outbreaks include:

- Limit access to farm to one gated road, and keep gate, and all unused buildings locked at all times.
- Control rodents and birds that may live in barns, especially feed rooms.
- Monitor visits and visitors, and do not take visitors to livestock areas or barns unnecessarily.
- Train employees to recognize common disease signs and patterns.
- Wash hands after being in livestock areas, use clean overalls and disposable boots or rubber boots (clean and disinfect rubber boots after each farm visit).
- Isolate all new animals.
- Call veterinarian immediately if unusual illness or signs of disease are found.
- Avoid transfer of dirt, mud or manure by vehicles, and closely watch vehicles carrying livestock at all times.

In addition to the added shipping protection, Pennsylvania's agricultural community has taken several steps to protect livestock and vegetation grown for public consumption since the events of Sept. 11 and a near breakout of foot-and-mouth disease.

In addition to farmers learning about ways to keep their livelihood safe, 4-H students and Future Farmers of America (FFA) members have begun learning about biosecurity measures.

"The life of the farmer has drastically changed," Bunt said. "Now we need to teach the farmers of tomorrow how they can protect their future."

The state legislature took significant steps during the 2002-2003 session to aid farmers in the protection of crops and livestock, with the passage of a bill to provide for criminal and civil penalties for crop destruction.

State Hereford Association Leadership Gathers In Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — On April 12, 29 state Hereford association leaders convened in Kansas City for the first State Officer Leadership Workshop sponsored by the American Hereford Association (AHA).

State leaders joined the AHA Board of Directors and staff for a day filled with idea exchanges that proved to be productive and educational.

Round table discussion groups were formed addressing questions about recruiting new members, state priorities and working with state cattlemens associations to promote the breed.

Dr. Bob Kropp, Oklahoma State University, moderated the event.

Dr. Dan Moser, AHAs Animal Breeding Consultant from Kansas State University, addressed the attributes of the Hereford cow, giving the association leaders exciting information to use in their promotion of Herefords at the state level.

After much research, Moser concluded, the ability of the Hereford cow to thrive in tough conditions and return pregnant year after year proves to be the biggest asset the breed has to offer the commercial cow-calf industry.

Mosers most exciting finding was based on results from the USDA Germplasm Evaluation Program conducted at the USDA Meat & Animal Research facility in Clay Center, Neb.

USDA found that the Hereford females produced the highest pregnancy rate when compared to all other breed groups. Hereford females expressed a 96 percent pregnancy rate compared to 86 percent for Angus, 87 percent for Red Angus, 91 percent for Simmental, 78 percent for Gelbvieh, 83 percent for Limousin, and 94 percent for Charolais.

Part of the conference was spent learning from successful state association leaders. Jack and Lyn Chastain, Texas Hereford Association, Kay Morgan, Nebraska Hereford Association and JoAnne Rogers, Texas Polled Hereford Association, shared with other leaders some of their experiences they face in their associations and how they work to promote Herefords in the state.

Chastains discussed trade show promotion and in their monthly publication. Morgan and Rogers gave an overview of coordinating and printing a monthly state newsletter and told of the benefits of a communication piece like this to inform the membership.

Johnny Woolfolk, Tennessee Hereford Association, Tom Granzow and Tom Krauss representatives from the Kansas Hereford Association, shared with the members what is involved in hosting a successful state feeder calf sale.

CWT Milk Price Program Scaled Back To 5 Cents Per Hundredweight

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — This week, a controversial self-help proposal to reduce milk production and boost farm milk prices nationwide was cut to less than a third of its original scope.

The National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF) failed to gather enough support for its idea of charging farmers 17.9 cents for each hundredweight of milk they produce to make the program work. As a result, the proposed figure was cut to 5 cents early this week.

According to Walt Wosje, chief operations officer of the initiative called Cooperatives Working Together (CWT), the most resistance came from the central parts of the country where dairy farmers see their regions as having too little, not too much, milk.

"There is some feeling that, well, we didn't cause the surplus," Wosje said of the lack of support for the program in certain areas.

In recent years, states in the West and Southwest have seen the most dramatic increase in milk production in the nation.

NMPF has said that the program needs a minimum of 70 percent of the nation's milk production, with an original goal of signing up 80 percent. The largest cooperatives are on board, including Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) and Land O' Lakes, but a number of the country's smaller cooperatives and independent producers are not.

Wosje said Wednesday that participation is "right around 70 percent." July 8 is the deadline for the board of directors to determine whether the program will move ahead with the 5 cent assessment.

Wosje said said he is "positive" about the scaled down version of CWT moving forward.

Alan Wagner, editor of the USDA's Fluid Milk and Cream Review, said in his July 2 report that "contacts close to the (CWT) issue, citing sharply higher cheese prices, lower cow numbers, and below year-ago milk output, feel that the plan may be beyond reviving at this time."

Herd buyouts, production cutback incentives, and export price assistance make up CWT's three-legged proposal to lift milk prices out of the unprecedented slump they've been in since late 2001.

Most of the buyout and reduction incentives are targeted to western and southwestern states.

Wosje said that even though dairies in certain regions are most responsible for overproduction of milk, the effects of it are felt "in every nook and cranny" of the nation.

All dairy farmers, large and small, and with a major cooperative or not, will benefit from the CWT, according to Wosje.

"Can farmers actually get together, join hands, and do something short of going to the government?" he said.

The new CWT proposal would use the proceeds from the 5 cent per hundredweight assessment on participating dairy producers to reduce milk supplies by a projected 1.2 billion pounds over the next 12 months. According to the NMPF, that should boost all-milk prices by an average of 23 cents per hundredweight.

The original CWT would have raised the price by 80 cents, according to planners.

"We created Cooperatives Working Together because our members told us they wanted to take control of the economics of their market," said Jerry Kozak, NMPF president and CEO. "Low milk prices are every dairy farmer's problem, regardless of size or location. Every farmer needs to be part of the solution."

Ethanol Company Moves Ahead On Lancaster County Site

CONOY TOWNSHIP (Lancaster Co.) — It looks like one of the nation's largest ethanol plants is coming to Lancaster County — and trash from the area may help run it.

Penn-Mar Ethanol's board of directors voted last week to pursue building an $80 million plant on 65 acres next to the Lancaster County incinerator along the Susquehanna River in the western part of the county.

"We are focused on the Conoy Township site," said Scott Welsh, project manager. "Unless we find a problem there that we don't anticipate, we will move forward with the permitting process."

The Lancaster County Solid Waste Management Authority's incinerator may provide the energy needed by the plant to convert corn into ethanol.

"We were very pleased to hear (Penn-Mar chose the Conoy site)," said James Warner, executive director of the authority. "We think that there are some terrific synergies between their operation and ours."

The authority approved a $25,000 purchase option May 23, giving Penn-Mar a year to purchase the property for $2.7 million. But the company also considered an undisclosed site, thought to be in York County. Welsh said that both were "good, solid sites" but the board felt the Conoy site offered more business opportunities.

"The rail service there is a real strength," he said. "We had to have good rail and good utilities. Natural gas, electric, water — they're all there."

Welsh said Penn-Mar is also looking seriously at the possibility of purchasing steam from the authority. Steam is used in the cooking process of the corn, he said, and to run a turbine to produce electricity. The authority uses steam from the incinerator to produce electricity that it sells to Metropolitan Edison Company. With Metropolitan's permission, the authority would like to sell some of that steam to Penn-Mar.

Warner said the authority first needs to address several issues with its electric sales agreement with Metropolitan, but he thinks a deal can be worked out.

Working with Penn-Mar could benefit both the authority and Penn-Mar, Warner said. The authority could increase its revenues by selling steam to Penn-Mar rather than converting it all into electricity.

Warner said steam would be a cheaper source of energy than natural gas for Penn-Mar, and that its use would save water and nearly eliminate combustion emissions.

"It would be terrific from an environmental standpoint," he said. "You are creating renewable fuel without having any emissions into the environment."

Penn-Mar would also save money in construction costs, Warner said.

The authority says just one of its three boilers could provide all the energy Penn-Mar would need.

Welsh said Penn-Mar will apply for necessary air-quality approvals from the Department of Environmental Protection and request a zoning change for the Conoy site within a month.

The property would have to be rezoned from agricultural to industrial to accommodate the plant, so Conoy supervisors will have the final say on the project.

Ethanol is most often mixed with gasoline to boost octane and reduce environmentally harmful emissions.

The plant would also produce carbon dioxide, used in soft drink-bottling plants, and wet distillers grain, which can be used by farmers as a high-protein feed source for their livestock. Township officials have seemed receptive to the project, though they haven't seen official plans, according to Welsh.

Gaining local approvals and permitting will dictate the timeline for the project, but Welsh said he thinks the company will be able to financially close on the project by the end of the year.

That would mean construction could start in early 2004 and the plant could be up and running in early 2005.

Welsh said the other site considered was larger and provided greater future expansion possibilities. But the board felt the Conoy site could provide enough space as well.

The plant would be the first in the state and one of the first on the East Coast. It is expected to contribute $24.7 million a year to Pennsylvania's economy, according to Penn-Mar.

The plant would convert 18 million bushels of corn into 50 million gallons of ethanol a year.

From a Lancaster New Era report.

Engineering Facility Affirms Pa. As A Leader In Wind Energy

BOOTHWYN (Delaware Co.) — Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Acting Secretary Kathleen A. McGinty recently helped mark the official opening of AdvanTek International LLC, a wind energy engineering facility that recently relocated from Delaware to Pennsylvania.

The facility, which employs 13 engineers and technical staff, will play a critical role in improving the efficiency of and doubling the land area for wind development in Pennsylvania.

"Fostering the development of companies like AdvanTek not only helps to cut pollution and improve environmental quality, but it also gives Pennsylvania a commanding edge in the renewable energy market, allowing for more opportunities in technology development and job growth," said McGinty.

Pennsylvania is already the leader on the east coast of the United States in wind energy production. Wind farms in Pennsylvania produce 35 megawatts of electricity — enough to power about 10,000 homes — with another 110 megawatts coming on line within the next year.

Demand for clean electricity continues to grow. Recently, the Pennsylvania Turnpike Authority, Swarthmore Borough, Swarthmore College and the University of Pennsylvania all increased their commitments to wind power by purchasing New Wind Energy from Community Energy, a Delaware County-based renewable energy marketing company.

Community Energy partners with existing electric suppliers to make renewable electricity available to commercial and residential customers.

Pennsylvania has been working to balance the need for affordable, reliable power with environmental concerns, making the state a leader in clean energy generation.

AdvanTek's technology will help to build a better rotor and wind industry in Pennsylvania, ensuring continued economic growth, environmental protection and energy security.

AdvanTek's decision to relocate and operate here comes as DEP launches a $5 million initiative, Pennsylvania Energy Harvest, to encourage the development of clean energy sources, such as biomass, wind, solar, small-scale hydroelectric, landfill methane, coal-bed methane, and even waste-coal.

Some of the sources are not truly renewable but offer measurable environmental benefits to Pennsylvania in terms of pollution reduction, environmental quality, and energy generation.

Quality hay production is the focus of the July 12 edition of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council's Foraging Around newsletter in Lancaster Farming. Also scheduled: Project Grass youth contest coverage, conservation updates, reports on forage preservation, and a calendar of events.

Herbicide-Resistant Weed May Invade Crops

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Field crop producers and landscapers across Pennsylvania should be vigilant for a new strain of super-weed threatening to gain a foothold in the state, according to an agronomist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

William Curran, professor of weed science and extension specialist for Penn State Cooperative Extension, has warned that surrounding states have been wrestling with a variety of the common annual weed known as "horseweed" or "marestail." This variety, he said, is showing resistance to glyphosate, the active ingredient in many popular herbicides.

"Horseweed is very common in the Northeast — it's actually a native species in Pennsylvania," Curran said. "It's mostly a problem along roadsides and areas that aren't tilled. Glyphosate is the active ingredient in Roundup, TouchDown, Glypho-Max and more — it's the primary product used to kill emerging weeds at planting time. If a weed is resistant to glyphosate, it's a huge threat not only to soybeans but to all crops grown with no-till planting techniques."

In 2000, glyphosate-resistant strains of the weed were identified in a few isolated fields on Maryland's Eastern Shore. By 2001, it had moved into about 30 fields. By 2002, it was in many no-till soybean fields in Delaware. It since has been identified in New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, Ohio, Tennessee, southern Kentucky and possibly as far west as Missouri.

"This year, we're really concerned about this weed getting a foothold in Pennsylvania," Curran said. "It could become an annual summer problem not just for corn and soybean growers, but also for the landscaping industry, where glyphosate-based herbicides are used frequently to kill weeds among bedding plants, in shrubs and on roadsides."

Over the next several weeks, Curran urges farmers, landscapers and others to keep an eye out for horseweed that isn't controlled by the standard application of herbicide.

"I think it's inevitable that it'll be here — it probably already is, and just hasn't been identified," Curran said. "This weed gets a foothold in no-till continuous soybean crops — where they grow soybeans in the same field for several years in a row. In Pennsylvania, that's not the norm. Most of the time, our more diverse crop rotations could keep this problem at bay.

'In places where it's a problem — such as Kentucky and Tennessee — they're rotating no-till cotton with no-till soybeans, so they're using the same herbicide on different crops. The key to preventing these kinds of problems is to rotate crops and herbicide families, change modes of action by not using the same herbicide annually, and use non-chemical methods to manage weeds."

Curran said if you suspect a resistance problem, notify your county Penn State Cooperative Extension agent immediately so that he or she can confirm that a problem exists.

"Investigate the causes and factors," he said. "How big was it at application? What rate or applications were applied? Is there a spray pattern associated with the surviving plant? Are the plants displaying different levels of herbicide injury? Just because you didn't kill the weed doesn't mean it's resistant. In fact, frequently it's not."

Each horseweed plant produces hundreds of thousands of seeds that disburse on the wind like dandelions. Swift action with alternative herbicides and other physical control methods can eliminate the plants, Curran said. Once they go to seed, it's too late.

"We're talking about horseweed today, but there are other weeds that can develop resistance," he said. "There have been some glyphosate performance problems with common lambsquarters and other weeds on Maryland's Eastern Shore and in portions of the Midwest. There have been more resistance problems worldwide with the ALS-inhibitor family — a different family of herbicides — than with any other family, and we're just starting to see those problems in Pennsylvania the last two or three years. The bottom line is that overreliance on any pest management strategy will eventually produce problems and possibly failure. Herbicide or pest resistance is just one example that's close to home."

Ag Committee Hears Testimony On WTO Negotiations

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The House Committee on Agriculture conducted a hearing May 21 on the status of World Trade Organization (WTO) negotiations on agriculture, the wide range of positions taken by other countries in these negotiations, and efforts to reach a consensus on agriculture reform in the WTO.

Secretary of Agriculture Ann Veneman and U.S. Trade Representative Robert Zoellick testified before the committee.

In his opening statement, Ag Committee Chairman Bob Goodlatte said, "For American farmers and ranchers, trade is an essential part of their livelihood. The WTO negotiations offer an opportunity for the United States to increase agricultural exports. It is essential that the voices of America's farmers and ranchers are heard in the WTO negotiations and that U.S. agriculture is a full partner in all negotiations."

In November 2001, the World Trade Organization Fourth Ministerial in Doha provided the timetable for worldwide trade negotiations on a variety of subjects, including agriculture. WTO agricultural negotiations began in 2000, in accord with the Uruguay Round Agreement, and then continued under the Doha Declaration.

"If the Doha Round is going to be successful, the European Union is going to have to reform its Common Agricultural Policy," said Ranking Member Charlie Stenholm.

"With regard to multilateral trade rules, Ambassador Zoelick has correctly pointed out that agriculture is 50 years behind the industrial sector, and I look forward to working with him and Chairman Goodlatte to reverse this situation."

The stated U.S. goal of these negotiations is to establish a market-oriented trading system that is fair, builds on strong rules with specific commitments on government support to agriculture, and for countries to reach agreement by January 1, 2005.

The U.S. first submitted its proposal for comprehensive long-term agricultural trade reform in June 2000. In June 2002 it announced specific levels of reduction in the areas of market access, export subsides, and domestic support.

The U.S. proposal was aimed at leveling the playing field through harmonization of tariffs and domestic support and elimination of export subsidies.

The March 31, 2003 deadline, expressed in the Doha Development Agenda, for adopting the reduction commitments passed without any agreement on proceeding with negotiations. However, it is anticipated that the WTO Fifth Ministerial, to take place in Mexico in September 2003, will help move the negotiating process forward.

Goodlatte and Stenholm expect to lead a delegation of ag committee members to the Ministerial meetings in Cancun.

Agricultural tariffs around the world average 62 percent while U.S. agricultural tariffs average 12 percent. The European Union (EU) is the largest user of trade distorting domestic support and is allowed to spend over $60 billion per year while the U.S. is allowed $19 billion. Additionally, the EU uses over 90 percent of the world's export subsidies.

The committee is also scheduled to conduct a June 18 hearing during to hear from several organizations representing farmers and ranchers across the U.S.

Free Nitrogen Soil Tests

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — Do you know how much nitrogen is available in your cornfields? Do you know how much nitrogen fertilizer your cornfields need for maximum production? Most farmers will answer these questions with an educated guess, but why guess when crop yields can be affected.

The most accurate means available to answer these questions is soil sampling. A soil test taken in March will accurately estimate the amount of phosphorous (P) and potassium (K)levels in the soil. Unfortunately, this report does not give the concentration of nitrogen (N) as it does for P and K.

To determine the available N, a soil test should be taken as close to the time of crop uptake as possible. A soil sample taken from a cornfield when the corn is approximately 8-12 inches tall can help determine what the N levels are in the soil. Once the samples are taken, the results provide the farmer with a means of rapid soil nitrate analysis.

As a service to Cumberland County farmers, this test is offered free of charge. The staff will assist in sample collection and run the test. Results from the test will be available within one or two days of sampling.

Those interested, can contact the agricultural staff at the Cumberland County Conservation District (717) 240-7812.

Greene County Youth Wins Somerset County Open Show

SANDRA LEPLEY
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — Sara Campbell, 17, of Sycamore in Greene County won supreme overall champion with her heifer "Marabell" during the Somerset County Junior Open Jackpot Steer Show here at the Somerset County Fairgrounds June 22.

There were 72 steers and 22 heifers entered. The show is sponsored by the Somerset County Beef Producers.

Sara's parents are Jamie and Jackie Campbell, and she has been showing steers since she was eight years old.

"It has taught me to be a more responsible person and also how to handle competition," said Campbell, who, along with her parents, drove about two hours to get to the show.

Campbell's county fair is the first week of August and she explained that this competition helps get her and her animal used to the show ring.

"I'm in the barn most of my day," said Sara, a member of Greene County 4-H Club. "When I'm not in the barn, I'm asleep."

Megan Fuls of Lebanon County won overall champion for the steers with her Angus crossbred named "Major." She is the daughter of Kevin and Karen Fuls and is a senior at Conrad Weiser High School.

Megan has been showing at the Somerset County show since she was eight years old and follows in the footsteps of her older siblings, Justin, 20, and Heather, 22, who both showed at the Somerset County show.

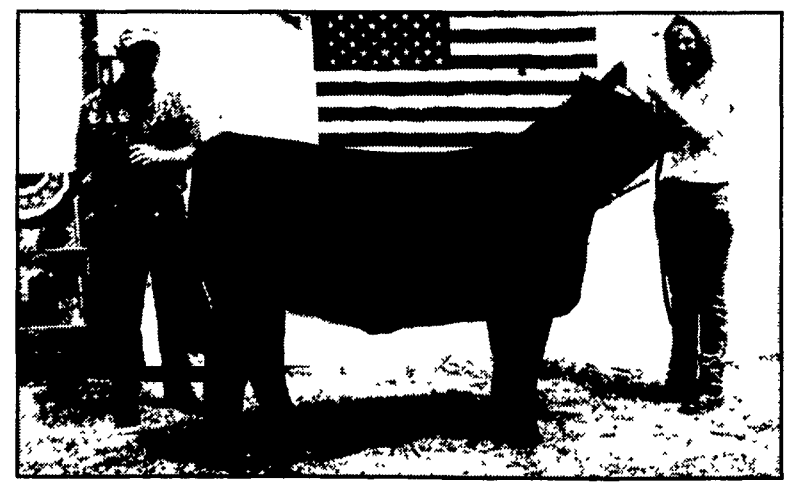
"I put a few hours in every day with my steer," said Megan, who is preparing for her county fair at the end of July.

Shane Cebulak of Morgantown, W.Va., won reserve champion in the steer show.

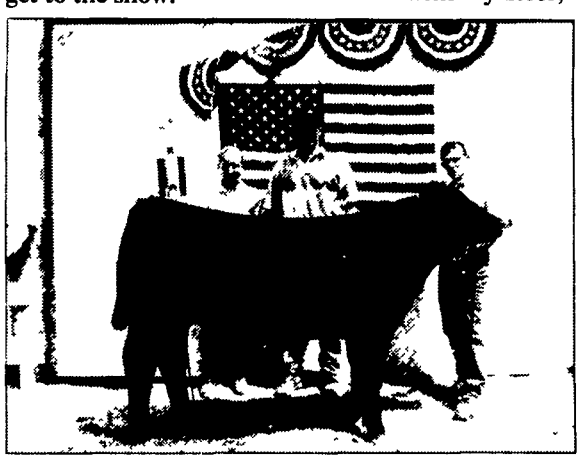
Jake Wheeler, 16, Somerset, won club calf champion and grand and reserve county steer and exhibitor. He is the son of Paul and Stacy Wheeler of Somerset.

"The beef producers here in our county promote the beef industry and this money goes back into the kids," explained Annette Knotts of Hydman, who coordinates the show every year. "We had steers from Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Maryland, and this helps kids get experience in showing and builds their confidence for the fair."

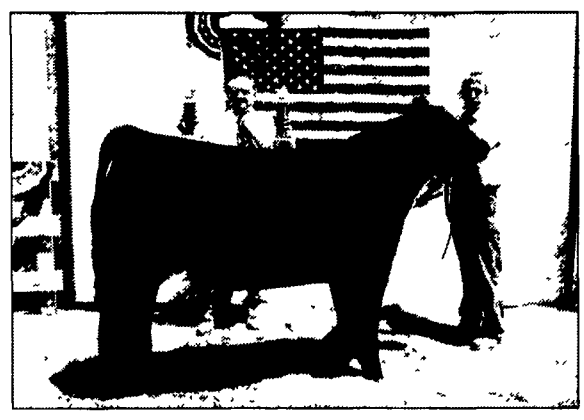
Steve Ehman of Dacatur, Ind., served as the judge for this year's Jackpot Show.



Sara Campbell, 17, of Sycamore in Greene County won supreme overall champion with her heifer Maine Anjou named "Marabell." She is the daughter of Jamie and Jackie Campbell and is a member of Greene County 4-H Club.



Jake Wheeler, 16, of Somerset, won club calf champion and grand and reserve county steer and exhibitor. He is the son of Paul and Stacy Wheeler of Somerset.



Shane Cebulak, Morgantown, W.Va., took reserve champion in the steer show.

Lancaster County Weekly Cattle

New Holland, Pa.
Report Supplied By USDA
Friday, June 27, 2003

	CATTLE	CALVES
THIS WEEK	2363	1796
LAST WEEK	2506	1648
LAST YEAR	1718	1596

NOTE: This report is last week's market review which was not printed because of the early presstime.

Compared to last week's closing prices, slaughter steers sold 1.00-2.00 lower on Monday and Tuesday, with the late week run trading mostly 1.00 higher. The quality of the run was below normal early in the week, with the cattle weighing up pretty good on Thursday due in part to the 90 degree temperatures; with an increase in quality noted as well. The finished market in Lancaster County remains extremely good, as nice sets of high Choice and Prime steers will still bring in the low to mid-80's, with the bulk of the Choice steers are trading from 76.00-79.00. This is very impressive considering the finished market everywhere else in the U.S. is in the low 70's. Nationally, the Western direct feed yards moved their show lists steady to 1.00 lower at mostly 74.00 on a live basis Dressed sales in the Northern Plains were steady to 2.00 lower at mostly 117.00, with the dressed movement in the Western Corn belt reported fully 2.00- 3.00 lower from 116.00-117.00. Even though the Board posted some decent gains on Wednesday and Thursday which moved the July live cattle contract up to 71.65, it was still not enough to run the bears out of the market; especially when it is at around a 3.00 discount to the cash trade. Historically, this is the time of year when prices dip into summer lows as packers crank up their chains to meet the grilling demand. Despite feed yards remaining very current, it looks like this year will be no exception; especially with the major question that is now seared into most cattlemen's minds, "when is the Canadian border going to open." It has been quite a while since we have seen any upward movement in boxed beef values. It was only a short time ago that records were shattered as the Choice cutout moved above 150.00. The current light and heavy Choice cutout is 132.31 and 132.60 respectively. Local Holstein steers sold steady to 1.00 higher for the week, with a fairly good run of slaughter heifers trending with a firmer undertone. Slaughter cows opened the week steady to 1.50 higher. However, after the boneless market moved sharply higher mid-week packers took note and added several dollars to their bids to fill their demands. Late week prices were fully 2.00-5.00 higher as the weatherman is forecasting nice summer weather for the upcoming Fourth of July weekend, with packers running full shifts to grind as much as possible to meet the demand for hamburger. Slaughter bulls have drawn support from the cow market as prices were 4.00-9.00 higher for the week. The reported supply this week in Lancaster County included 1001 head of slaughter steers, 124 head of slaughter heifers, 948 head of slaughter cows, 143 head of slaughter bulls, and 147 head of feeder cattle.

Slaughter Steers. High Choice and Prime 2-4 1145-1495 lbs 77.25-83.50, mostly 79.00-83.00 Choice 2-3 1120-1495 lbs 76.00-79 75, mostly 75.00-77.00 early in the week, Charolais and Limi-crosses 77.50-81.00 with a fancy single at 82.75, heavyweights 1500-1560 lbs 77.00-81.75. Few Yield Grade 4 or full 1370- 1415 lbs 73 25-73.75 Select and low Choice 2-3 1120-1470 lbs 73.75-77.00, higher yielding 76 25-78.25. Select 1-2 1040-1355 lbs 71.00-75 50, few heavier muscled up to 77.75.

Holstein Steers: High Choice and Prime 2-3 1330-1580 lbs 68.85-72.00. Choice 2-3 1210-1570 lbs 65.10-69 50. Select and low Choice 2-3 1210-1500 lbs 62.00-66.75 Select 1-2 1135-1500 lbs 60.25-64.50. Standard 1-2 1105-1320 lbs 58.00-62 00, 54.25-59 50 early in the week.

Slaughter Heifers: Choice, few Prime 2-3 1010-1420 lbs 74.75-78.25, few 73.85-76.50 early in the week, few Limi-crosses 73.00-78.75.

Slaughter Cows: Premium White, 65-70% lean, over 1600 lbs, 50.25-59.00. Breakers, 70-75% lean, over 1400 lbs, 45.50-55.25, low dressing 42.00-50.25. Boners, 75-80% lean, over 1200 lbs, 42.00-50.00, 36.25-46.50. Lean (Hi-Yield), 80-85% lean, over 1200 lbs, 40.75-48.00, low dressing 38.50-41.00. Lean, 85-90% lean, over 1000 lbs, 35.50-43.00, up to 44.75, low dressing 32.75-40.25 Lean (Light-wgt), 85-90% lean, 750-100 lbs, 30.00-39.25, low dressing 28.00-35.25.

Slaughter Bulls: Yield Grade 1 1020-2330 lbs 50.00-60.00, high dressers 63.00-68.00. Yield Grade 2 1000-1665 lbs 48.50-53.00, 2645 lb individual 57.50.

Calf Summary: Compared to last week's closing prices, veal calves sold steady to 3.00 lower. Holstein bull calves suitable to go into special-fed veal barns sold sharply higher to open the week. However, for the second week in a row the late week demand was very light as prices moved 10 00-40.00 lower. The baby calf market has been trading very sporadic over the past few weeks. It's no secret that producers are thrilled to be receiving up to 260.00 for their dressed calves. However, most are remaining very cautious as they re-stock their barns, because most know prices could very well move sharply lower if the border were to open, although there is still no word of an opening. Holstein heifer calves moved sharply higher for the week as fancy heifers were as high as 510.00 by week's end. This week the PA Department of Agriculture graded 1150 head of heifers and bulls in Lancaster County, this is compared to 1057 the prior week.

Veal Calves: Good and Choice one 215 lbs 116.00; 300-400 lbs 99.00-109.00; one 535 lbs 86.00. Standard and Utility 60-130 lbs 17.00-50 00, weaker down to 11 00

House Estate Tax Vote Could Increase Taxes For Farmers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The House of Representatives, June 18, rejected a measure to reform estate taxes and, instead, passed a measure to permanently repeal the tax in 2011. National Farmers Union said the House action could actually increase taxes for family farmers.

NFU President Dave Frederickson explained that under the House repeal proposal, heirs to moderately sized estates could face capital gains tax liabilities. "This legislation would establish a large new tax on American families that have more modest means and that would never be subject to the estate tax," he said.

A tax increase will likely result from the loss of the "stepped-up" basis clause contained in the current estate tax statute, Frederickson said. Current law adjusts the value of assets based on current values rather than original costs. Contrary to the rhetoric of repeal advocates, current law also assures that double taxation rarely applies to farm operations that are transferred from one generation to the next. These benefits to family farmers and ranchers could be lost if estate tax repeal is enacted.

Permanent repeal would result in nearly $1 trillion in lost federal revenues over the next 20 years, which Frederickson said would create higher budget deficits and reduced funding for services.

PLNA Receives Clarification On Loan Eligibility

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Landscape and Nursery Association President Gregg Robertson and Director of Government Relations Michele Corbin Rudloff recently met with the Department of Community and Economic Development Deputy Secretary to seek clarification on loan eligibility for the Small Business First Loan Program (SBF) and the Machinery and Equipment Loan Fund (MELF).

As previously reported, the SBF and MELF programs were recently opened to include production agriculture operations. PLNA's retail center and landscape contracting members are not eligible for the SBF or MELF programs, however, if they are located in distressed areas they would gualify for the Community and Economic Development Loan Fund (CED).

SBF offers up to $200,000 for land, building, machinery, equipment, and working capital. If filed within 9 months of a natural disaster, such as the 2002 drought, the interest rate is 2 percent. MELF offers up to $500,000 for machinery and equipment. The interest rate varies from 3-5 percent. CED offers funding for retail and commercial operations in distressed areas for up to $200,000 or 50 percent of the cost of the program. The interest rate for CED is 2 percent.

For all of the programs, applicants must contact their local economic development office to begin the loan process. A list of these offices is available at www.plna.com under Government Relations Compliance Center or by calling the PLNA office at (800) 898-3411.

Grazing Increases Profitability

Let the cows harvest your crop at a higher quality and lower cost. Managed grazing, as the name implies, does require high management. Call us or others with experience and learn this system. Profit per cow is typically $100 - $200 more than conventional systems. Cull rates typically drop, and cows tend to be healthier. Your cows and your family will thank you. BMR Sorghum Sudangrass is an easy crop to learn on.

On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Most days, life here is a bit like living on the animal planet TV channel.

Our shows are predominantely black-and-white, with Holstein cows scattered at various places around the farmstead. Mostly, that's the barns and pastures, but sometimes the backyard, or out in the middle of a field, strolling down the road or trashing the alleyways in the calf pen. Their care and feeding, milking and cleanup, vet care, health maintenance, breeding, and various-related chores are all-consuming.

While the cows are the backbone of our animal planet life, it's the bit players that often provide the most entertainment.

Parked on the bird feeder one morning early last week was a squirrel, hunkered down and stuffing sunflower seeds into its fuzzy gray face with a vengeance. It's the first squirrel to frequent the feeder in nearly a year, when the prior resident bushy-tail had a run-in with one of the barn cats. And lost.

While the squirrel was stuffing its cheeks, the two hen "wild" turkeys scrounged around under the feeder, pecking up dropped seeds. Each sat on a nest of eggs for several weeks, with no results, so The Farmer shooed them out of the hatching pen, back to a life of free foraging. They promptly showed up the next morning outside the calf barn. Foraging for calf feed.

While the hens tried their best to do the mothering bit, the gobbler suffers with an identity crisis. Despite having been penned with the hens for a couple of weeks, he returned to his old haunt after release. A weedy patch between the barns, lounging around with a couple of ancient chickens, is where the gobbler prefers to spend his days.

Sometimes the hens buddy up with the pair of guinea fowl. But turkeys are much too slow and plodding, and get left in the dust by the hyperactive guineas. The guineas also spend a good bit of time cozied up to the pickup topper currently parked on the ground outside the shop. Apparently they enjoy socializing with the two identical guineas they see in the refletive windows.

Guineas are our animal planet comedians.

Daily, I've been shooing out of the yard two dozen Canada geese that shinny up over a large wooden beam edging the lawn from the sloping pond bank, cross a flower bed and graze on the grass. With a meadow and several ponds available, these birds insist on lounging, lawnside, under the big willow tree. A goose "fence" I put there of brush and limbs deterred their crossing. By at least a minute or two.

Along with all these is the crew of assorted barn cats that keep us company doing chores, a slew of backyard songbirds including cardinals, blue jays and several scrappy doves, whose behavior is more like the hawk that lives high above the woods. There's even a good-sized snapping turtle that parades around the farm and a fat rabbit in the back yard, our own tortoise-and-hare pair.

While we generally co-exist with all our animal planet cast, we do have an occasional close encounter of the scary sort.

Foxes are a familiar sight, finding easy living on the plentiful roadkill along the interstate highway cutting through the farm. Spying one poking around the backyard on a recent morning, though, is unnerving. Soon after, our daughter reported that a fox had been sitting on her patio, where their little children regularly play.

We agreed that this fox was getting far too familiar, and likely had a problem. Erratic behavior and loss of fear by normally-wild animals are often symptomatic of rabies.

As we enjoyed a snack on the porch that evening, the fox suddenly came trotting into the yard. The Farmer is a fair shot, and moments later, ended the strange fox's invasion.

A bit later, I found a phone message left earlier by a neighbor, alerting us to the bizarre actions of a fox that had been roaming the yards of our wooded development next door, peering in glass doors and generally acting aggressive. Police and wildlife officials had told them to have someone shoot the fox and dispose of it. Could we do that if we spotted it?

A quick return call thanked her for the warning and assured her that the fox was already history.

All of us in our local animal planet neighborhood rested easier that night.

Well Preserved

Fruit Pie Fillings

The Well Preserved news column is prepared by Lancaster County Cooperative Extension. It includes food preservation information and questions.

In addition to using in pies, canned pie fillings make a fast, easy topping for cheesecake, serve as fillings for cakes and Danishes, and add color and flavor over an angel food cake with ice cream.

Reproducing these tasty fruit fillings has been a challenge for the home canner because adding starch in the form of flour, cornstarch, or tapioca to a canned product creates both safety and textural problems.

The common household starches break down during the canning process causing a runny consistency. Commercially prepared pie fillings use a modified food starch to overcome these problems.

The home food preserver can make fruit fillings with excellent and safe results using Clear Jel, which is a modified food starch that withstands the canning process. Unlike ordinary cornstarch, Clear Jel works well with acidic ingredients, tolerates high temperatures, and doesn't cause pie fillings to "weep" during storage. It is a good choice for canning homemade pie fillings because it doesn't begin thickening until the liquid begins to cool. This allows heat to be distributed more evenly within the jar during processing. This is an important safety advantage because the starch is not thick enough to interfere with the killing of spoilage organisms during processing.

It is the only thickener the USDA recommends for home canning. However, don't freeze products made with Clear Jel as they tend to break down when frozen. It is available only through a few supply outlets and is not available in most grocery stores.

In Lancaster County Clear Jel can be found in many stores where bulk foods are sold. Find out about its availability before gathering other ingredients to make fruit pie filling. Make sure you are getting the type of Clear Jel that requires cooking-sometimes called Clear Jel type A. The instant type of Clear Jel will not work in recipes requiring cooking and is only suitable for frozen pies. There are about 3 cups in 1 pound of Clear Jel.

Recipes have been tested for canning apple, blueberry, cherry, and peach pie fillings. Below is one of the tested recipes. You can obtain the others by calling the cooperative extension office and asking for the flyer "Let's Preserve Fruit Pie Fillings."

Because the variety of fruit may alter the flavor of the fruit pie, you should first prepare a single quart, make a pie with it, and taste it. Then adjust the sugar and spices in the recipe to suit your personal preferences. The amount of lemon juice to fruit and liquid should not be altered because it affects the safety and storage stability of the filling. Do not substitute any other thickener for the Clear Jel.

Blueberry Pie Filling

For one quart to test recipe use:

- 3½ cups fresh blueberries
- ¾ cup plus 2 tablespoons sugar
- ¼ cup plus 1 tablespoon Clear Jel
- 1 cup cold water
- 3 drops blue food coloring (optional)
- 1 drop red food coloring (optional)
- 3½ teaspoons bottled lemon juice

Ingredients needed for 7 quart jars:

- 6 quarts fresh blueberries
- 6 cups sugar
- 2¼ cups Clear Jel
- 7 cups cold water
- 20 drops blue food coloring (optional)
- 7 drops red food coloring (optional)
- ½ cup bottled lemon juice

Wash and drain blueberries. For fresh fruit, place 6 cups of blueberries at a time in 1 gallon boiling water. Boil each batch 1 minute after the water returns to a boil. Drain but keep the heated fruit in a covered bowl. Combine sugar and Clear Jel in a large kettle. Stir. Add water and, if desired, food coloring. Cook on medium-high heat until mixture thickens and begins to bubble. Add lemon juice and boil one minute, stirring constantly.

Fold in drained berries, immediately fill jars with mixture, leaving 1-inch headspace. Remove air bubbles. Wipe jar rims. Adjust lids and process pint or quarts jars immediately in a boiling water bath for 30 minutes.

Note: Frozen blueberries can be used in the above recipe. Follow the same basic recipe, but make these changes. Select unsweetened frozen berries if possible. If sweetened fruit is used, rinse the fruit while it is still frozen. As the fruit thaws, collect any juice and use it for part of the water specified in the recipe. Use ¼ cup Clear Jel for one quart, and use 1¾ cups Clear Jel for seven quarts.

Where trade names appear, no discrimination is intended, and no endorsement by Penn State Cooperative Extension is implied. If you have food preservation questions, a home economist is available to answer questions on Wednesdays 10 a.m.-1 p.m., call (717) 394-6851 or write Penn State Cooperative Extension, Lancaster County, 1383 Arcadia Rd., Rm.1, Lancaster, PA, 17601.

Sisters Reign As Perry County Dairy Royalty

MILLERSTOWN (Perry Co.) — Amanda and Erica Kresge brought home the crowns and sashes from the Perry County Dairy Princess Pageant conducted on June 7. Lenard and Amy Kresge of Loysville are the parents of these accomplished young ladies.

The top prize was won by Amanda, who is 17 years old and will be a senior at West Perry High School. She served as the Alternate Dairy Princess last year and received her crown from the 2002-2003 princess, Amber Rock.

Her numerous activities include FFA, dairy judging, 4-H Dairy Club, 4-H Dairy Goat Club, and Kistler Clovers. She is also a member of the County 4-H Council and the West Perry chapter of the National Honor Society.

Amanda is also a dependable part of the family's Loysville farm. She helps with the milking, calf and heifer feeding, diagnosing and treating sick animals, and taking care of the goats.

During the pageant Amanda presented a speech on the Three-a-Day program that is sponsored by Dairy Promotion. She stressed the importance of dairy products in everyone's daily nutrition.

The contestants also presented dairy related skits. Amanda portrayed a radio talk show host who answered a variety of milk related questions from, the Tooth Fairy, Santa Clause, and the Grim Reaper.

She finished the competition with an impromptu question, "How would you get more teenagers to drink milk in school?" Amanda was certain that having ice cold milk in easy to handle containers would make a big difference.

Erica will be representing the county as the Alternate Dairy Princess for 2003-2004. Erica is 16 and will be a junior this fall at West Perry High School.

She is active in the FFA, Kistler Clovers, the 4-H Dairy Goat and Dairy Clubs, as well as county 4-H council. She has been very active in dairy judging, competing at local, state, and regional contests. Her keen eye for dairy cattle has propelled her and her team to the top of several contests.

The speech Erica gave during the contest concerned the perception of the dairy industry to those who consume the products. She stressed the importance of keeping the lines of communications open and correcting misconceptions.

During the skit portion of the competition, Erica invited a few of her childhood friends for a "tea" party with milk. A doll and several stuffed animals were in attendance as she served up the milk with important facts about the nutrients in it.

In response to the impromptu question, Erica felt that advertising and promotion would increase consumption in the high schools.

Five other young ladies will spend the year helping the Kresges' promote the Dairy Industry.

Serving as Dairy Ambassador will be Allycia Trout, daughter of Jeff and Tammy Trout, Blain. The Dairy Misses will be Alexis Seidel, daughter of Tom and Nan Seidel, Elliotsburg; and Kaitlin Trout, daughter of Jeff and Tammy Trout, Blain. Lil' Dairy Misses will be Jane Delancey, daughter of David and Sharon Delancey, Millerstown; and Katie Osborne, daughter of Jim and Irene, Millerstown.

Monica Franklin Crowned Bradford County Dairy Princess

CAROLYN MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

LERAYSVILLE (Bradford Co.) — Prior to being crowned the 2003 Bradford County Dairy Princess at a pageant last Saturday at the Northeast Bradford Elementary School, here, Monica Franklin's goals were clear.

"I'd love to be the dairy princess because the farmer needs to be promoted in any way, shape, or form, and I think I can do that," said the 16-year-old Franklin, who resides on a dairy farm in Warren Center.

Franklin is the daughter of William and Pamela Franklin and will be a senior at Northeast Bradford High School in the fall.

Named first alternate was Courtney Kline. Kline is the 16-year-old daughter of Glen and Lori Kline. She resides on Y-Run Farm, a 400 cow dairy located just outside of Troy. In the fall, Kline will be a junior at Troy High School.

Johnica Hunsinger, of Troy, was named the second alternate. She is the 17-year-old daughter of Lorinda Slocum and Duane Hunsinger, and will be a senior at Troy High School in the fall. Hunsinger currently works at Steve Pelton's dairy farm and at Lottahill Farm.

During the competition, contestants were required to meet with three judges, perform a prepared skit for the audience and answer an impromptu question.

In her skit, Franklin taught the ABC's of milk as she recited the alphabet with words of wisdom relating to each letter.

"I was in the barn yesterday talking to my cow Sassy, and she was teaching me the ABC's of dairy," said Franklin. "M is for milk, something everyone should drink," she said when she got to that letter.

Kline, a devoted NASCAR fan chose a high speed skit where milk and all the nutrients contained in milk were in a race for the checkered flag in the "Got Milk? 600."

"By drinking milk and eating other dairy products, the drivers get lots of their needed vitamins and minerals, but not just NASCAR drivers need dairy products. We, the public, and fans of NASCAR, also have to make sure that we get our three servings of dairy every day," she said.

Hunsinger wowed the crowd with her soccer skills as she reviewed the game plan for milk.

"I want to be the best soccer player I can be, and coach said If I follow his game plan, I can be the best I can be," she said as she reviewed the notes on the benefits of dairy.

"Dairy will give me the healthy body I need to play soccer every day." Contestants were required to think on their feet as they answered the question,

"If you had to come up with a new idea for dairy promotion, what would it be?" Franklin responded to the question be noting that she had been thinking about different ways to promote milk for quite some time.

"I was thinking about a dairy maid and dairy princess auction. What would happen is that the dairy maid or dairy princess would be auctioned to a public place and the public places would put in bids. The dairy princesses and the dairy maids could then give out information to the public." Kline noted that she would do something with the six breeds of cows.

"There's a lot of talk about the 3-a-day and that's very important, but we also need to remember the cows and what the cows stand for." Answering the same question, Hunsinger quipped, "Swim in a pool of milk," before saying, "I would want to do a promotion at one of the farms that I work at or go to the courthouse and tell them that dairy products are good for you."

Monica Franklin, center, was crowned the 2003 Bradford County Dairy Princess at a pageant recently. Here, she is surrounded by her court; first alternate Courtney Kline, right, and second alternate Johnica Hunsinger.

Before the coronation, 2002 Dairy Princess Anna Johnson, bid a tearful farewell to the farmers of Bradford County.

"As little girls, most of us dream of wearing a crown. A sad thing happens as we grow older, the dream begins to fade. Other things become more important, we all lead busy lives," said Johnson.

"It takes a special kind of person to remember this dream, to say, not only do I want to wear a crown, but I want to be a leader. I want to be an example to other girls so that they will carry the torch when my reign has come to an end."

Johnson thanked everyone for the opportunity to represent the dairy farmers of Bradford County. Prior to the 2002 pageant, Johnson admits she had little knowledge of what being a dairy princess really meant.

"I know exactly what it means to be a dairy princess (now). It means representing an amazing industry and farmers who put as much hard work into their business as they put into their families," she said.

2002 alternates Gina Alderfer and Jessica Hunsinger also thanked the crowd for the opportunity to represent Bradford County.

Each member of the 2002 court wished the new dairy court the best of luck in the coming year.

"These three contestants have taken an extra step. They have decided to make their dreams come true. Just sitting on this stage tonight takes a kind of courage that most don't possess.

"One of these ladies will be given the opportunity to carry the title of Bradford County Dairy Princess, for one year, but all three will become a team in representing the dairy industry and the farmers of Bradford County," said Johnson.

Rounding out the dairy promotion team for 2003 are dairy maids, Lindsey Andrus, Genna Chilson, Juli Hunsinger, Abbie Kuhlman, Erica Kuhlman, Brianna Morse, Lydia Shedden, Courtney Slater, and Allison Waltemyer.

Family Traditions Through Foods

As families gather for summer celebrations and reunions, this may be a good time to trace family traditions and history through the foods that are served at these events.

Family food traditions are usually unique to each family. No other family eats precisely the same foods as your family.

Food can be reflective of our family's roots and heritage, as well as societal norms and trends. For example, families from different cultures tend to prefer certain foods.

Lately, you may find low fat, low salt, or reduced sugar recipes appearing or increasing in popularity. In addition, you might see food trends, such as popular salads or desserts.

If your get-together includes a "potluck," suggest that each person bring a copy of the recipe. The recipes can be collated, copied, and distributed to interested family members. Make sure to put the date of the event on the recipe booklet. Save these booklets of recipes-over the years, you can definitely spot the favorite dishes and trends. Each generation creates traditions-over time, you can see traditions cease to exist as new ones are adopted.

One note of caution — not all cooks are totally honest with their recipes. Some leave out one or two ingredients or specific instructions so the recipe cannot be duplicated exactly. Why? People who have a strong personal identification through their culinary expertise do not want to share their specialties with others. Instead of denying a request by saying, "That's my special recipe," they share the recipe, but without a complete listing of ingredients or directions so the results cannot be exactly duplicated.

Ideas to record family food traditions and histories include answering the following questions. Answers can be recorded either by hand or with a tape recorder.

How was the table set?

What time of the day was the meal served?

If a prayer was included, who said it? What was prayed?

Who served the meal, set the table, and cleaned up?

Was there an order as to who was served first?

Were special dishes used for serving or eating?

How did you know when the meal was finished?

What sort of activities took place before or after the meal?

QUESTION — Alice Weaver wants a recipe to make cream cheese.

ANSWER — After serving as a Lebanon County Dairy Maid for three years, Jessica Bross was named Lebanon County Dairy Princess and has begun her fourth year of working on the dairy promotion team. "My mission still remains the same, to promote the importance of consuming dairy products," writes Bross.

Since President Reagan designated July as National Ice Cream Month, what better month to promote dairy products, points out Bross. "Who doesn't like the cool refreshing taste of ice cream on those hot summer nights of July?" Bross sent in the following two recipes.

Chocolate Frosty

2 cups buttermilk
2 cups chocolate milk
2 tablespoons sugar
2 cups chocolate ice cream

Mix buttermilk, chocolate milk, and sugar. Add ice cream and beat until smooth and frosty. Serves six.

Ice Cream Sandwich

Place two graham crackers together sandwich fashion, using a slice of ice cream as filling. Dip sides into chocolate sauce if desired.

ANSWER — Kelley Marzka, Crawford County Dairy Princess, writes that "summer is in full bloom with children enjoying all the fun it provides, from swimming, camping, and playing baseball to picnicking in the sun. Here are a few dairy treats to help cool off your little ones."

Raspberry Frosty

2 cartons raspberry yogurt
1 cup milk
2 cups raspberry sherbet

Place all ingredients in a blender container and cover. Puree until smooth and frothy. Serve immediately. Makes five cups.

Fruit Dip

1 package cream cheese, softened
1 jar marshmallow cream
2 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon grated nutmeg

In a medium mixing bowl, combine cream cheese, marshmallow cream, milk, vanilla, and nutmeg, beating until smooth. Place dip in a serving bowl and serve with assorted fruits.

ANSWER — Mary Hoffman, Elizabethtown, was looking for a recipe for "Schmeircase." Thanks to Beverly Hanifin, Ware, Massachusetts, for sending in this recipe, which Hanifin describes as a dip or spread with egg.

Schmiercase

3 hard boiled eggs, chopped fine
8 ounces cream cheese, softened
18 olives, chopped
1 tablespoon chopped chives
5 tablespoons sour cream

Mix sour cream with cream cheese. Add olives and chives. Beat. Blend in eggs.

In addition, a Mechanicsville, Maryland, reader, sent in the following recipe for Hoffman's request for the spreading cheese.

Schmiercase

5 gallons skim milk
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 cup cream
½ cup butter
2 teaspoon salt
1 cup hot milk
1 tablespoon dry cheddar seasoning (optional)

Let the five gallons of skim milk set until thick (clabber). Heat until uncomfortable for the hand. Drain through a course cloth bag and squeeze out all the whey possible.

To the four cups of dry cheese crumbs add baking soda and mix well. Cook in a double boiler with one cup hot cream. Stirring constantly, cook 10 or 15 minutes or until crumbs are mostly dissolved. Add butter, salt, and one cup hot milk. Dry cheddar seasoning may be added.

Cook another five or ten minutes, stirring constantly. Use more or less milk and test until it is the right consistency to spread. Test by tasting. If it sticks to your mouth while it is still hot it needs more milk.

ANSWER — In answer to a previous question, we received such an interesting variety of cake mix recipes that we saved a few extras and are printing them now. The first recipe is from Regina Mack, New Bethlehem.

Basic Cake Mix

2½ cups flour
1¼ tablespoons baking powder
1¼ teaspoons salt
1¾ cups sugar
¾ cup shortening
¼ cup dry milk

Sift dry ingredients three times. Rub shortening into dry part until it is a cornmeal texture. Lift lightly into containers and store at room temperature. May be kept for three months. Dry milk may be omitted if whole milk is used instead of water for the batter. With this mixture you can make the following cakes:

Plain Cake

1¼ cups mix
½ teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup milk or water
1 egg
Bake 25-30 minutes at 375 degrees.

Spice Cake

Add to plain cake:
½ teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon cloves
⅛ teaspoon allspice

White Cake

Add to plain cake:
1 egg white (instead of one whole egg)

Chocolate Cake

Add to plain cake:
1 tablespoon cocoa before any liquid

Here is a larger version from Leah Glick, Denver.

Basic Make-Your-Own Cake Mix

9½ cups all-purpose flour
6 cups sugar
¼ cup baking powder
1 tablespoon salt
2¼ cups shortening (use a good solid shortening)

Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder, and salt. Cut in shortening until it gets to the consistency of very fine crumbs.

Divide mix into four equal portions of 4½ cups each. Place in airtight containers and store in a cool, dry place up to two months. Another option is to place in freezer containers and freeze up to six months To use, allow mix to come to room temperature.

Variations are as follows:

Yellow Cake

4½ cups (1 portion) baking mix
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs

In a mixing bowl, combine all ingredients. Beat at low speed until moistened, about one minute.

Beat two minutes at medium-high speed. Pour into two greased and floured nine-inch layer cake pans or a 9X13-inch pan and bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes.

White Cake

Prepare batter as for yellow cake except use three egg whites instead of two whole eggs. Whites may be beaten separately and folded in last for a fluffier cake. Bake as directed.

Spice Cake

Prepare batter as for yellow cake except add:
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon allspice
¼ teaspoon cloves
Add spices to cake before adding the milk

Chocolate Cake

Follow directions for yellow cake except add ¼ cup cocoa powder to cake mix before adding the milk.

Chocolate Chip Cake

Use two greased and floured 9-inch layer pans. Prepare batter as for yellow cake. Pour ¼ of the batter into each of the two pans and sprinkle with ¼ cup finely-chopped semi-sweet chocolate pieces, or tiny chocolate chips over batter. Add remaining batter to each pan and sprinkle another ¼ cup chocolate pieces over batter. Bake as directed.

Pineapple Upside-Down Cake

⅓ cup butter
⅔ cup brown sugar
8 slices pineapple
8 maraschino cherries

Melt butter in a 9X13-inch cake pan. Stir brown sugar into butter. Arrange pineapples in pan with cherries in the center of each pineapple slice. Prepare batter for a yellow cake and pour over the top. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 to 35 minutes. cool in pan five minutes, then invert on a plate. Serve warm. Delicious with ice cream or whipped cream.

SUN Area Ag Festivities Fill Two Days

SELINGSGROVE (Snyder Co.) — Two days of Ag Dairy Day festivities for the SUN Area, which includes Snyder, Union, Northumberland, and Montour counties, ended with the crowing of Denae Johnson of Union County as the SUN Area Dairy Princess on Saturday June 21.

The Ag/Dairy Days festivities were conducted at the Susquehanna Valley Mall in Selinsgrove.

"Sunde" Members of the committee and volunteers scoop sundaes to serve to the mall patrons.

While the transfer of the SUN Area dairy princess crown was a major part of Ag/Dairy Days, several other festivities took place during the event.

The Ag/Dairy Days event began in full swing on Friday evening with the construction of a giant ice cream sundae. Future Farmers of America members from local chapters, committee members and other volunteers helped to build the huge sundae which was made up of 99 gallons of vanilla ice cream, 4 gallons of strawberries, 7 gallons of chocolate fudge, and 20 pounds of peanuts. Sponsors for the sundae were, Turkey Hill Ice Cream, Ag Choice Farm Credit, Pardoes Perky Peanuts, W. A. Dehart, Inc. and Rockwell Center Assisted Living.

More than 1,000 12-ounce dishes of ice cream were served during a two-hour period while mall patrons stood in lines more than 10 feet long waiting for their share of this great dairy product.

During Friday evening and Saturday, 105 pounds of cheese samples were available for the mall patrons. Sponsors for the cheese tasting samples were M&T Bank, Mifflinburg Bank and Trust, SUN Bank and West Milton State Bank.

Pictures with "Daisy", the SUN Area Dairy Princess Committee Mascot, were available on Friday evening and Saturday for a $2 donation to the SUN Area Dairy Princess Committee. Saturday's events included Milk Punch samples and a Pedal Power Tractor Pull.

The Milk Punch samples were distributed by the Snyder County Holstein Association. Weis Markets donated the ice cream and sherbert for 1,700 five-ounce cups served during the six hours the samples were available.

Youth ages 3 through 9 took part in a Pedal Power Tractor Pull that was held in Boscov's Garden Center. Sponsors for this event were Boscov's, DFA-Dairylea, Penn State Cooperative Extension-Snyder County, Valley Ag and Turf, Hoober, Inc., Mifflinburg Farm Supply, Inc. and Donald Erdley Farm supply.

Participants of the pull received trophies for first place, rosettes for second and third places, and all participants received String Cheese. In addition, Swineford National Bank held its annual Scooper bowl, with proceeds to be donated to the local Snyder County 4-H Foundation.

Speakers for the dairy princess pageant included Michelle Shearer, SUN Area dairy princess committee chairwoman, Steve Kline, Beaver Community Fair Association; and Dawn Marie, Big Country Radio. Jane Hawn, Boscov's public relations department, served as emcee at the pageant, which also featured a fashion show with dairy princess royalty modeling Boscov's apparel.

Now that the pageant is over, newly-crowned Dairy Princess Johnson,-along with the 12 dairy maids and misses will undertake the charge of promoting the dairy industry throughout Snyder, Union, Northumberland and Montour Counties.

Judges for the Dairy Princess Pageant included Jessica Bailor, 1998 Juniata County Dairy Princess, and Beth Ann Cooley, 1988 Lycoming County Dairy Princess.

Outgoing SUN Area Dairy Princess Melissa Wolfe, with help from her court and committee members, traveled about 8,000 miles to promote the dairy industry during the past year. Within the Snyder, Union, Northumberland, and Montour counties she completed 112 school promotions, 184 newspaper articles, 238 radio/TV appearances, 49 store/mall promotions, 141 non-farm meetings, 15 farm meetings, 28 special events and 5 state events, for a total of 772 promotions.

First place Pedal Pull winners show off their trophies.

Smart Stuff
with Twig Walkingstick
Dear Twig: Are strawberries berries?
Yep, strawberries are red, sweet and juicy. But, nope, technically, strawberries aren't berries at all They're "aggregate fruits" they form from a flower that has many ovaries
To explain the ovary is the part of a flower that ripens into a fruit While some flowers have one ovary, other flowers, like the strawberry flower, have many
When a strawberry flower is pollinated (by bees and their friends), the ovaries swell and form what's called the fleshy receptable — the red, juicy part you eat. (The tiny "seeds" on the outside are actually called achenes Inside each achene is a seed The green leafy crown at the top is the calyx)
Since an aggregate fruit forms from more than one ovary, it's called a complex fruit Raspberries (aggregate fruit), blackberries (ditto) and mulberries (multiple fruit) are also complex fruits
True berries, on the other hand, are a type of simple fruit: they form from a flower that has just one ovary The inside of a berry is soft and mushy and usualy has more than one seed Grapes, tomatoes and cranberries are berries So are bananas!
Strawberries peak in June where I live Tonight I'll eat some aggregate fruit pie!
Strawberrily,
Twig

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

The Fourth of July weekend is not celebrated as much in our household now as it was earlier. The children looked forward to seeing fireworks and shooting their toy pistols — although we do look forward to a pig roast that our son has every July for his friends and relatives. There is something about a big farm wagon loaded with food that brightens everyone's mood, provided that the weather cooperates.

At one time a few years ago I would not have even considered buying the food that I now purchase. This year we bought beautiful asparagus from an Amish family who lives near us. I froze it for use next winter. And we also froze some very nice strawberries that were for sale along the road.

Rather than make jam this year, I think we'll use what we have on hand on the basement shelves. However, other vegetables in the garden are doing fine despite the deer that live in the meadow just yards away.

My husband fell again — this time in the bedroom. He was dressing for Sunday church and we put a Band Aid on the small flesh wound and went to church. However, the small wound did not heal and he was sent to the emergency room two weeks later to be checked for a blood clot. Can you believe that we had to spend more than seven hours there? No lunch and no evening meal, as we waited to be discharged.

Then, a few days later, they finally X-rayed his leg only to find that it was cracked completely across the large bone, and so with a broken leg he must wear a stabilizer for three months.

Lancaster Farming

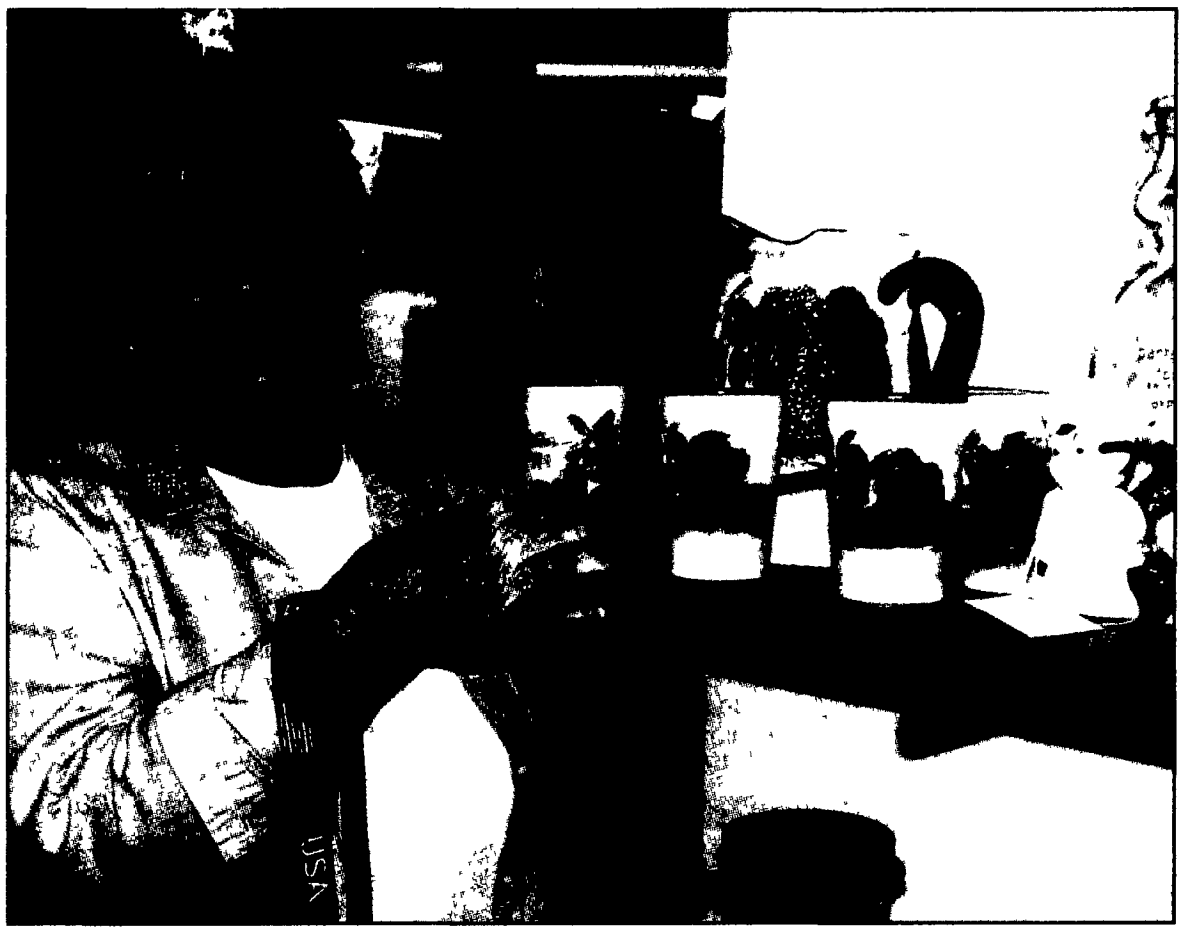
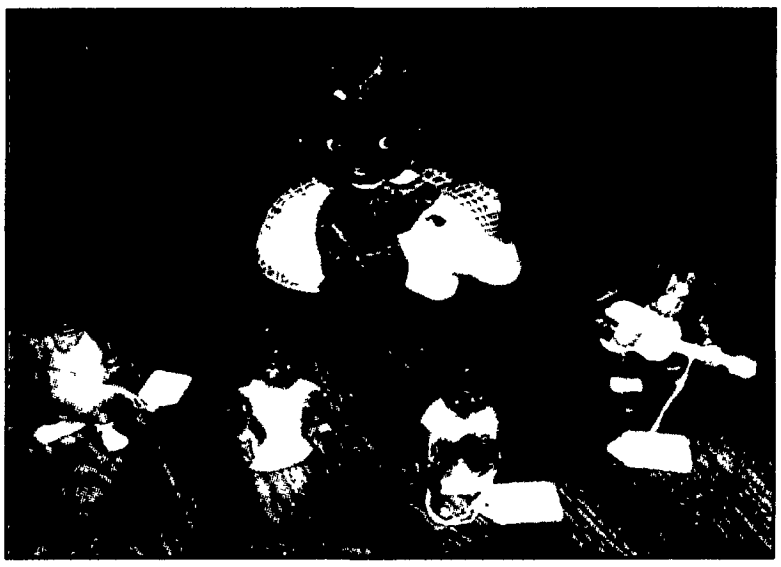
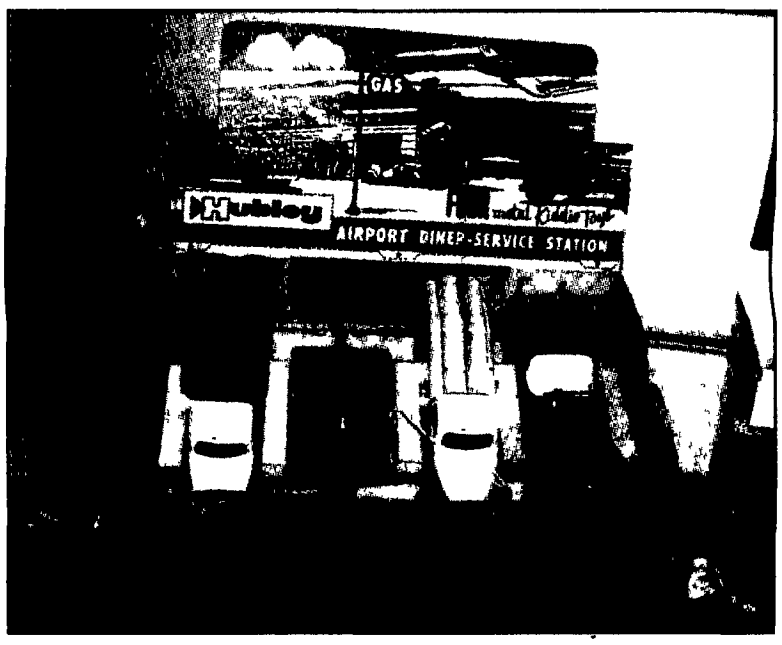
Antiques Center



1970s' stuff is hot according to Sidney Herr. Items such as the windmill patterned pitcher and tumbler set remind baby boomers of their childhoods.



Items portraying blacks (African-Americans) have been produced in many forms and sell well at auctions, shows, and shops. Pictured are a Nodder bank black boy, Fat Albert, and salt and pepper shakers. Black collectibles or black memorabilia are part of United States history and is why so many people want to collect it.



Keep your childhood toys as evidence by the rising prices garnered for toys. The boxed truck set from Hubley, Lancaster, originally sold for $10, now sells for $365.

Barn Houses Antiques, Collectibles

This two-piece Blue Cambridge set with a four-footed bowl and dish in the Caprice pattern is hard to find.

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — A 1940's barn at the corner of Routes 322 and 743, showcases a wide variety of antiques and collectibles.

The barn was originally owned by Hershey Trust for the Hershey School's horse barn. When the adjoining house needed to be torn down to make way for Rt. 322, the barn was no longer used for horses.

It's location makes it a prime spot for visitors who attend Hershey attractions. Of prime interest to tourists are Hershey items, but the barn showcases a wide variety of antiques and collectibles.

About 95 dealers display a nice mix of china, crystal, primitives, furniture, tools, toys, and much more.

Bud and Sidney Herr have a "his and her" booth. Bud sells guy stuff such as tools and oil cans. His wife Sidney displays glassware, primitives, can collectibles.

"She collects stuff for herself and when she gets too much, she puts it out to sell," Bud said.

Crossroads Antique Mall's hours for June, July, and August are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. seven days a week, except for holidays when it is closed. For more information, call (717) 520-1600.

Here are some of the items spotted at the Crossroads Antique Mall recently.

Deal Of The Day

A customer at Crossroads Antiques Mall, Hershey, considers he claimed the deal of the day, when he purchased this Cowden Wilcox spittoon for $250. Made in Harrisburg between 1850s-1860s, the spittoon is similiar to those that the buyer has seen sell for up to $2,000. "The name is what makes it valuable," he said.

Recognize This Instrument?

This unusual piece captured Gaynold McClintock's curiosity at a flea market. When the handle is turned, the instrument fans out into a circle. It must be refolded manually. After purchasing it, McClintock had it secured to a piece of wood using six screws, three on each side. McClintock would appreciate any information readers have about this piece. Is it an antique? What is its use?

Casting For Fishing Collectibles

You hear a lot about duck decoys but less about fishing collectibles. Yet, just as with duck decoys, there are examples of fishing lures by skilled craftsmen.

Not only lures but also tackle are being collected. Some can be costly. But, for the most part, depending where you find them, they can be bargain priced. Some of the most expensive lures are those that are considered a form of folk art. For the dedicated fisherman it's simply a matter of collecting something that is reminiscent of a favorite pastime.

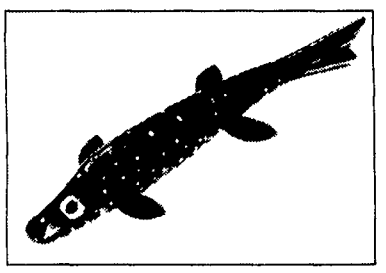
Call it a lure or a decoy, several factors determine the value.

Craftsmanship, condition, materials, and rarity make the dollar differance between a few dollars or several hundred.

While age is important, mid 20th century lures that can be attributed to a known artist get top dollar. Among some of the most important, working in the 1930s to 1950s are Hans Janner Sr., Abraham Dehate, and Andrew Trombley — all of Mount Clemens, Michigan.

Many folk artists, such as Oscar Peterson of Cadillac, Michigan, not only carved lures but also fish-related items, such as plaques and advertising signs. Peterson, considered one of the "greats" by collectors, delivered quality and quantity. A landscaper by trade, he used his carvings for added income. Collectors believe that there may be nearly 2,000 of his works waiting to be discovered. One way his pieces can be identified is by his use of bright primary colors. The late Hans Janner Sr. has the distinction of being considered "the best pure carver of fish decoys who ever lived."

Bavarian born, he later settled in Mount Clemens, Michigan. His early pieces were not usually painted and the carving was simplistic. Collectors search for decoys done in the 1940s and 1950s, when they became highly stylized. They can be identified by their full bodies, broad tails, and by center identification and subtle colors.



Handcrafted spearfishing decoy, 1930s, is from the collection of Ron Adamson's Classic Fishing Lures and Tackle.

Ice-spearfishing decoys were among the earliest forms. It is thought that the first decoys were made by Eskimos. Ancient artifacts and more recent pieces show how the hunting ritual required making "killing implements" things of beauty.

Carved of bone and antler, they outlasted wood. Hundreds of years later, in America, they were painted in colors to attract the fish. In the 20th century, contemporary materials were added to all types of fishing decoys.

They included not only wood but glass beads, wire and even pieces from tin cans. In New York State the tails were often of leather. Bits of fish skin were also attached.

The jackknofe and drawing knife were the tools of choice in the 20th century. White pine, tulipwood or basswood were carved out and lead added to help them sink. While many of these lures weren't painted, those that weren't didn't necessarily attempt to imitate nature.

Fishing rods and reels are also serious collectibles. Quality reels were made in the mid 19th century by Austrian emigrees, the Vom Hofe family. Collectors also look for late 19th century mass-produced reels.

When interest in big game saltwater fishing became popular around 1910, reels were made to meet the demand. By the 1920s the Pflueger Company offered the Templar reel.

CLUES: Unfortunately there are lots of fake fish decoys around. Copies of the Peterson decoys are being made. However, as another category, beginning collectors might consider them, since they are well made. Also faked, are the new York State fish with leather tails.

Angus Advertising Wins National Awards

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — The American Angus Association's national advertising campaign was recently recognized as among the best in agriculture, winning two first place awards in the National Agri-Marketing Association's (NAMA) Best of NAMA awards.

"We couldn't be more pleased with the success this campaign has had, both in professional advertising competitions and in creating demand for Angus genetics," said Susan Rhode, director of public relations and communications for the Association.

The two first place awards for the Association were in the categories of radio advertising single entry, and radio advertising series. Before being honored on the national level the radio series was named "Best of Show" on the regional level, being chosen the top entry over all categories.

The awards were presented at the Best of NAMA awards ceremony April 15, in San Diego. The competition included a total of 1,157 entries that were entered by NAMA members in six regions across the United States.

Entries were judged in 71 specialized categories and only 452 entries were chosen to advance to the national competition. The Association had four entries, including the two radio entries and two additional print advertising entries, advance to the national level this year.

Junior Angus Leaders Will Gather In Fort Worth This Summer

FORT WORTH, Texas — Junior Angus members are already planning for the 2003 LEAD (Leaders Engaged in Angus Development) Conference, July 31-Aug. 3 in Fort Worth, Texas.

The conference, "Discover your Worth in Fort Worth" will include speakers from the beef industry, tours of the Fort Worth area, and workshops presented by the directors of the National Junior Angus Association (NJAA).

"LEAD is designed for the older junior members who take leadership roles in their state associations," says Lacey Robinson, NJAA leadership director. "Our goal is to teach them skills that they can take back to the state level to further enhance their associations."

Speakers at this year's event will focus on agriculture in Texas, the role of the commercial producer in the beef industry, the beef consumer, marketing cattle in the South, and being a leader. In addition, the NJAA board will present workshops on communications, the beef industry, presenting icebreakers and working with state junior associations.

A day of tours will allow the participants to tour the Cowgirl Hall of Fame, the Texas and Southwest Cattle Raisers Museum, Sullivan's Show Supply, as well as visit Camp Cooley Ranch near Franklin.

Space is limited to the first 150 participants. Juniors can pre-register for LEAD by June 15 for a price of $175; the early registration deadline for advisors is $150.

After the June 15 deadline, cost increases to $200 for juniors and $175 for advisors.

For more information or to register online, go to www.njaa.info or contact the junior activities department of the American Angus Association at (816) 383-5100.

Hog Production Provides Opportunities For Large And Small Operations

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Hog production in Pennsylvania is a growing market for family farmers across the state. With almost 99.5 percent of Pennsylvania farms and acreage being family owned, all of the hogs in the state are raised by family farmers.

Although the majority of those family owned farms are larger, more modern and environmentally friendly operations, there is still room for smaller, independently operated farms to produce pork products for market.

"We support the efforts of all hog farmers in Pennsylvania, whether they manage a large or small operation," said Bob Gueldner, president of PennAg Industries Association. "A safely produced, high quality product is what's important to the consumer," he said.

Gueldner points out, however, that much of the sustainable production on smaller farms often cannot produce the desired end-product. Free range access can increase the animals' risks of being exposed to diseases, safety hazards are eminent since biosecurity is often overlooked, and there is a greatly increased threat of environmental endangerment due to relaxed management practices.

The environmental controls practiced in modern units generally exceed those of older and smaller operations. For example, larger hog operations minimize water waste. "A nursery pig uses about one gallon of water per day, a finishing pig uses about 3 gallons of water per day, and a sow uses about 6 gallons of water per day. That's a relatively small amount compared to the 100-plus gallons of water per day used by the average person," said Brent Hershey, chairman of PennAg's Swine Council.

"These controls which protect the environment are also strictly regulated and enforced by local and federal government programs in which many smaller farms are not required to participate," Hershey said.

Due to the firm management guidelines practiced on larger farms, some of the highest quality food in the world is produced. The population of the U.S. last year was 284,000,000 and yet food in the U.S. was still some of the most affordable of anywhere in the world.

The average U.S. citizen spends a little more than ten percent of their income on food. Elsewhere, people spend upwards of 20 to 25 percent of their income on food. "Local consumers prefer the high quality food which is safely produced throughout numerous Pennsylvania communities," said Gueldner.

Family Tradition Spans 40 Years At All-American

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Shank family tradition of showing purebred Ayrshires began more than four generations ago when William Shank of Hagerstown, Md. began showing in the mid 1950s. Initially, the farm was called Rocky Spring Farm, and its showstring of purebred Ayrshires traveled to Harrisburg to the first All-American Dairy Show in 1964.

The Shank Family would quickly prove their animals were strong competitors by winning the junior yearling class at the 1965 show with a homebred animal, Rocky Spring Royal Jonquila. From this early show onward, the Ayrshires of the Shank Family would be very prominent at All-American dairy shows.

Continuing in his father's footsteps by showing and breeding remarkable Ayrshires, William's son, Ralph Shank, and his bride, Patricia, purchased an additional farm in Hagerstown and changed the Shank farm name to Palmyra Farm. The change of the farm name was due to the tradition that, during and shortly after the Civil War, farms in this area were titled by the owners on the deed of the property.

This piece of property purchased by Ralph and Patricia was known as Palmyra. With this new farm name for the herd, three additional generations of the Shank family would exhibit Ayrshires. Ralph and Patricia encouraged their two children, Ralph Shank Jr. and Mary Shank Creek, to become active breeders of purebred Ayrshires and show them in FFA and the Maryland 4-H program.

The Palmyra showstring has not missed a single All-American Dairy Show since its inception in 1964, nor has it missed a trip to the Maryland State Fair since the early 1940s. During their 4-H and FFA years, Mary and Ralph Jr. showed their project animals at the All-American Dairy Show and were also members of the dairy cattle judging teams representing Maryland at judging competitions.

Ralph was a member of the Maryland 4-H judging team, along with renowned dairy judge Dennis Patrick, from the nearby Ayrshire farm, Maple Dell. Mary was a member of the 1980 Virginia Tech judging team and won the overall individual reasons award in her senior year. Her team also placed second in the overall contest. Ralph Jr. and Mary showed at the All-American Dairy Show as junior Ayrshire members, and Mary has judged state and national shows at the All-American Dairy Show since her graduation.

Mary Shank married Michael Creek, and all four of their children have judged and shown Ayrshires through 4-H, FFA, and junior Ayrshire programs. Their children, Michael, Mark, Evan, and Jordan, are familiar faces in the show ring and are definitely a strong part of the successful Palmyra Ayrshire tradition.

In 1999, the Creeks' twin sons, Mike and Mark, represented Maryland at the Invitational Youth Dairy Judging Contest at its All-American, and the team placed first in the 4-H division. Mike also received the overall first-place individual award. Erin and Ryan, children of Ralph Jr and wife, Terri, have also participated in the judging and showing competitions held during All-American show week.

For many reasons, Oak Ridge Brvis Bonnie, EX 94 is one of the families favorite Ayrshires. Bonnie certainly knows her way to the champion circle at the Eastern National Ayrshire Show, conducted during the All-American Dairy Show. She has been named grand champion three times — 1978, 1980, and 1982, and was named reserve grand champion in 1976. Bonnie has turned out to be quite a brood cow with many daughters and granddaughters selected as bull mothers. She has three daughters on the "One Elite Cow List" of the National Ayrshire Association, and many offspring that have been very successful in the show ring. The most recent honor belongs to her great granddaughter, Palmyra Reno Bethany-ET, shown by Jordan Creek, who was selected as the first place junior 2-year-old cow.

In addition to Bonnie's success and numerous class placings, the showstring of the Shank-Creek families have been awarded the following championships and premier breeder and premier exhibitor banners: 1977 grand champion with Palymra Dolmen Tammy EX-91, 1979 and 1980 reserve grand champion with Tammy, 1993 grand champion with Covey Farms CVH Rosetta, premier breeder in 1977, 1982, and 1983, and premier Exhibitor in 1976, 1977, 1978, 1979, 1980, 1982, 1983, and 1990.

One of the most memorable trips to the All-American Dairy Show was in 1980 when Palmyra Farms won grand champion with Oak Ridge Brvis Bonnie and reserve grand champion with Palmyra Dolmen Tammy. When asked how that felt, Mary Shank Creek smiled and responded, "Well, it was a good day."

Ralph Jr. And Mary both agree that they enjoy the quality of the Ayrshire show at the All-American Dairy Show and felt that the competition has been strong since its inception. Mary remarked, "The premiums have always been generous to the exhibitors but recently have been quite helpful when keeping a full showstring on the road." She also believes the facilities are exhibitor friendly and they appreciate a quality national show so close to their farm.

When asked if any other trips to Harrisburg that stand out, Mary sighed and said that the flood, which occurred in 1975, will never be forgotten. She said trailers just pulled up one after another and loaded many farms' animals and took off as soon as possible.

Then another trailer would come and get the next load. It was common for many exhibitors to have their showstring on numerous trailers. She was just relieved to have all their animals transported safely and get home. She will never forget the overwhelming hospitability offered and arrangements the All-American Dairy Show personnel gave to the exhibitors during the dangerous moments of the high flooding. The concern for the safety of all exhibitors and their cattle was well appreciated by everyone involved. She and her brother, Ralph, laugh about the conditions now, but they said they were unsure of where the flooding was worse, in Harrisburg or at home in Hagerstown, where the nearby Antietnam Creek flooded their farm and the cattle trailer almost did not make it to the barns.

Four generations, with more than a dozen members, of the Shank-Creek Family have been more than just participants at the All-American Dairy Show. It is exhibitors like this family that make the All-American Dairy Show the best national show for youth, adults, and quality cattle. It is a top quality dairy show where exhibitors from all over the U.S. and Canada bring their cattle to complete with other elite dairy animals.

The Palmyra Ayrshire Family will be one of the six farm families to be honored at the 40th Anniversary celebration of the All-American Dairy Show Sept. 21-25 at the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg. For more information, contact the All-American Dairy Show office (717) 787-2905 or e-mail aads@pa.state.us.

Penn State Beef Sale Set For Nov. 7

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Renewing a time-honored tradition, Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences this fall will hold a beef cattle sale.

The first sale at Penn State since 1990, the event will be an educational experience for students, a fund-raiser and an opportunity to share Penn State genetics with other beef producers.

Angus breeders from across the East are expected to attend the "Penn State Proud! Beef Cattle Sale," which is open to the public. Starting at noon on Nov. 7 at the Beef-Sheep Center off Orchard Road, approximately 50 cows will be sold, according to beef unit manager Don Nichols.

Many of the cows will have calves at their side and heifers will have been bred to top A.1. sires. Very few bulls will be sold.

Although the sale is expected to generate more than $100,000, Nichols believes the biggest benefit is to students.

"We are developing students who will be qualified to merchandise cattle," he says. "They will learn marketing techniques and the subtle things we do to prepare animals for sale. This will teach them something that they can take home. They'll meet people in the business and hopefully make merchandising contacts that might help them later."

Nichols hopes this year's sale will be the first of many, held at regular intervals at Penn State.

"Sales help us to control our cattle inventory, and they allow us to offer our genetics to other Angus breeders throughout the country," he says.

"With the number of cattle we have and the long-range plan, we should get back to having sales every two or three years. It is something that we have to build on. Sales attract students and help the breeders."

For more information about the beef sale, call (814) 863-0831 or visit http://das.psu.edu/beefsale/ on the Web.

Research Sheds Light On Why Protein-Rich Diets Aid Weight Loss

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — As nutrition experts debate the ideal combination of protein, carbohydrates and fat that people should eat, new research explains for the first time how and why a moderately high protein diet may be the best for losing weight.

The new findings suggest that eating more high quality protein will increase the amount of leucine, an amino acid, in the diet, helping a person maintain muscle mass and reduce body fat during weight loss. Maintaining muscle during weight loss efforts is essential because it helps the body burn more calories.

While the body makes many other amino acids, it does not produce leucine, so people need to consume foods rich in it. Leucine is found primarily in high quality protein foods such as beef, dairy products, poultry, fish and eggs.

The findings of two related papers involving diets of increased protein and reduced carbohydrates appear in the February issue of the Journal of Nutrition. Both studies were led by Donald K. Layman, professor of nutrition in the department of food science and human nutrition at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Layman, also a professor in the College of Medicine, tested his hypothesis on 24 mid-life, overweight women who consumed diets of 1,700 calories a day for 10 weeks. Physical activity of the participants was held constant.

The control group ate according to the USDA Food Guide Pyramid, consuming approximately 0.36 grams of protein and 1.3 grams of carbohydrates per pound of body weight per day.

Study group participants increased the amount of protein they ate daily to about 0.73 grams per pound of body weight and reduced their intake of carbohydrates to 0.95 grams per pound of body weight.

They also built their diets around high quality proteins, which provided the optimal level of leucine to improve body composition. Leucine has been shown to be a regulator of muscle, which is important to maintain when losing weight.

Layman cautions that it is a mistake to think about dietary protein as a percent of calories. "What is important about my plan," he said, "is that protein needs are based on body weight and not on a percent of the calories consumed."

The study group's daily diet consisted of nine to 10 ounces of meat, including at least seven beef meals per week, three servings of low-fat milk or cheese, and a minimum of five servings of vegetables. They also included two servings of fruit and four servings of grains, pasta and rice, and they ate in accordance with the National Cholesterol Education Program's Step 1 heart-healthy guidelines.

Most of the public debate about diet continues to focus on the extremes of very high (Atkins' Plan) or very low (Ornish Plan) levels of proteins. Layman's plan falls within the protein range recently recommended by the National Academy of Sciences Food and Nutrition Board. The USDA Food Guide Pyramid falls at the low end of the accepted protein range.

In Layman's study, both diet groups lost a similar amount of weight, about 16 pounds, but the study group lost more body fat and less muscle mass than the control group. Those who followed the moderately high protein diet lost two pounds more of body fat, yet maintained one pound more muscle mass than the control group.

The study challenges the conventional wisdom about the role of low-fat foods in weight loss, Layman said.

"Traditionally, people have built a diet around low-fat foods, instead of high quality protein foods. Study participants following the moderately high protein plan, which I call the 'Sensible Solution,' were twice as effective in maintaining lean muscle mass," he said. "Muscle helps burn calories, but is often compromised during weight loss."

Revised Zoning Ordinance Preps Township For Future

CAMPBELLTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Revised A-Agricultural Zone. Revised RR-Rural Residential Zone. Expanded Home Occupation Options. These three areas reflect a few of the revisions to the regulations of land use in South Londonderry Township when the Board of Supervisors passed the revised Zoning Ordinance at the February meeting. The ordinance, the culmination of months of research, revisions, and review, was prepared by the Township's Planning Commission chaired by Bill Pauza. The Board of Supervisors conducted its final public review meeting at 6:30 p.m. prior to adopting the ordinance.

According to Township Board of Supervisors Chairman Phil Rothermel, the Zoning Ordinance is the first of several ordinances that will be revised, reviewed and adopted over the next few months and is a natural progression in the planning process starting with the Comprehensive Plan implemented in June 2001.

"The Comprehensive Plan provides the goals and objectives for guiding the growth and preservation of our township," said Chairman Rothermel. "This forms the basis for creating the Zoning Ordinance, which regulates the uses of land, is to assure the health, safety, and general welfare of property owners based on these goals and objectives."

Both Rothermel and Rugh Henderson, a member of both the planning commission and the board, agree 'clustering' and 'preservation' are key words in the revised Zoning Ordinance. The concept of clustering in Agricultural and Rural Residential Zoning will assist to limit sprawl by permitting a few more lots on a given property in exchange for keeping them together, on less desirable soils and away from the roads. The document also creates a General Commercial Zone to connect new development areas and the new connector road in Campbelltown, as well as a new Industrial/Commercial Zone to encourage economic development.

"The revised Zoning Ordinance protects our natural features such as streams, woodlands, and wetlands with the creation of a new Conservation Zone," added Henderson. "Because more of our residents are working out of their homes, in most cases through computers and the Internet, we expanded the Home Occupation options."

Kays reminds business owners and residents to talk to the zoning office first once a parcel of land is found. The office will refer to the Zoning map to see what the allowed uses are and will review the Zoning Ordinance. Should the intended use not be permitted there are a few options: revise the plans, ask for a hearing before the zoning hearing board, or look for another parcel of land.

South Londonderry Township that abuts Dauphin County to the west and Lancaster County to the South is faced with intense development pressure.

"As we grow, it costs more in services than residential housing generates in tax revenues. It is important to attract business to stabilize our tax base," added Chairman Rothermel. "To achieve all the goals of the Comprehensive the Zoning Ordinance, it is the desire of the Board of Supervisors to be flexible. We invite developers and engineers to bring innovative and imaginative ideas in their designs—to help us meet the objectives of our overall plan for South Londonderry Township."

Options For Disposing Of Ag Plastics

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The use of plastics for storing forages is a fairly new phenomenon. While the plastics used to cover forages are necessary to lower dry matter losses in horizontal storage methods, the disposal of the plastic presents a challenge. At present there are few viable methods available for safe disposal.

Among these options are open burning on-site. According to Penn State publications, many states and municipalities are beginning to outlaw this practice. Regardless of whether the practice is legal in any area. It is simply dangerous.

According to Craig Saxe, University Wisconsin Extension, often the burning of plastics results in incomplete combustion. This results in parts of the plastic liquefying only to re-solidify elsewhere, such as the lungs. When the results of plastic inhalation are unknown, it is best to avoid this procedure altogether.

Another option is to bury or dump the plastics on-site. This is not a viable option. Especially as banks and realties begin looking at the farm dump as a liability. The cost of clean up can be overwhelming.

Option 3 is to recycle the plastics. There are several restrictions here. Recyclers require that different types of plastic be kept separately. Many require large truckloads to be shipped at a time. A common range required is 30,000 to 40,000 pounds. Most recyclers also require the plastics be baled and to be clean of general dirt and water.

Use a waste to energy facility. If this is available locally, it is a great method. The modern incinerator is capable of taking material such as agricultural plastics and converting them to electricity. These facilities often attain over 99.9 percent combustion. The emissions on these facilities are regulated and extremely clean.

The fifth and final option today is use a sanitary landfill. While this can be rather expensive, it is certainly a better option than burning or burying plastics on-site. Landfills are sealed top and bottom to minimize pollution.

As pollution and energy shortages become a greater concern, there will likely be more and better solutions to the problems presented by agricultural plastics. However, until then we must continue to handle them in as safe of a method as possible.

New Bale Handler Stacks Large Rectangular Bales

LITCHFIELD, Ill. — The new, RBH-4000 Bale Handler from Worksaver, Inc., handles and stacks two 4'×4'×8' large rectangular bales or three 3'×3'×8' large rectangular bales.

Designed for use with tractor loaders, the Bale Handler features heavy-duty UHMW-polyethylene bushings that provide smooth operation of the hook rod assemblies. Other features include five 26" long forged spears that are spaced along the bottom of the RBH-4000. These spears help support the bales during pick-up and moving.

For additional support, the bale handler is equipped with six 18" long forged spears for the uprights. Each upright has 5 moveable hooks. Users can position the hooks to suit their individual handling needs.

Quick attach brackets that fit most popular loader models are available.

Sussex Irrigation Earns Lindsay Top Dealer Award

OMAHA, Neb. — Lindsay Manufacturing Company recently recognized Sussex Irrigation Co., Inc., Laurel, Del., as one of the top Zimmatic® dealers in North America at the company's annual awards banquet in January. Sussex Irrigation Co., Inc. was selected from more than 200 Zimmatic dealerships.

"To earn this award, a Zimmatic dealer has to have a proven track record of customer service and market leadership," said Bob Snoozy, vice president of sales. "Sussex Irrigation Co., Inc. has achieved this recognition through innovative performance and outstanding service, and Lindsay Manufacturing is proud to recognize their accomplishments."

Zimmatic Dealers are becoming more important as the technology available today allows growers the ability to automate irrigation and to gather soil, weather and environmental data to increase operating efficiency. Gehl Puts Heavy Chores To Rest

WEST BEND, Wis. — Gehl is making sure farming operations have the speed and power needed to tackle heavier material handling chores.

With the introduction of their Model 7800, Gehl offers the biggest and fastest skid loader available. Powered by a 110-hp turbo diesel, this unit includes a 3,600-pound SAE operating load rating and a top ground speed of 14 mph.

For sweeping, cutting stumps, moving grain, digging trenches, moving brush or blowing snow, Gehl's top-end skid loader has the raw power and hydraulic capabilities that make it one of the most productive pieces of equipment on the farm today. The new All-Tach™ powered quick-attach system makes changing attachments fast and easy — connect and disconnect attachments right from the operator's seat.

"This new skid loader was designed from the ground up to be the ultimate in terms of digging and lifting performance," said Kelly Moore, Gehl skid loader product manager. "It features vertical-lift linkage, which provides consistent forward reach throughout the entire lift cycle."

With 3,300 psi system relief pressure and 40 gpm high-flow auxiliary hydraulics, the Model 7800 delivers unmatched breakout force and greater hydraulic attachment performance. Its lift height is 11 feet, 10 inches.

According to Moore, "A two-speed drive is standard, allowing faster travel speeds. And the new Hydraglide™ ride control system option provides floating lift arm action for a smoother ride."

Case IH In Search Of Farmall Photos

RACINE, Wis. — Case IH is looking for a few outstanding photos of Farmall tractors — a brand that defined the word "tractor" for generations of farmers. Winning entries in "The Spirit of Farmall Photo Contest" will appear in the 2004 Case IH Farmall custom calendar that will be distributed worldwide.

The contest coincides with Case IH's revival of the Farmall name on a line of compact tractors to be launched later this year. "We're bringing back the name because the new tractors carry the spirit of their famous predecessors," said Jim Irwin, vice president of the Case IH North American agricultural business.

Each contest entrant may submit up to three color Farmall images. Thirteen finalists will be selected: one for each month and one for the cover. Finalists will receive a 1/16th scale model Farmall Super H tractor and 20 calendars to share with family and friends.

Deadline for contest entries is Friday, July 11. Photos must be submitted as 35mm prints from film negatives or slides, or digital photos on disk — horizontal format preferred. It isn't recommended that photographs include people operating or standing in front of the equipment. Nevertheless, people in the environment are fine. Case IH retains all rights to photographs upon submission, but originals can be returned if the entrant includes a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

For more information about "The Spirit of Farmall Photo Contest" and for entry forms, visit the Case IH Website at www.caseih.com or contact Deena or Shannon at (800) 435-7844 or (904) 264-6006.

New Sub-Compact Tractor Combines Versatility And Value

TORRANCE, Calif. — An all-new sub-compact tractor joins Kubota Tractor Corporation's (KTC) successful BX Series for 2003.

Combining versatility and value, the BX1500 is equipped with a 15-hp, 2-cylinder, liquid-cooled, Kubota diesel engine that provides performance and agility.

The Z602 Kubota diesel is quiet and smooth featuring a newly designed engine balancer and superior exhaust suppression allowing for comfortable and quiet performance.

Kubota's unique 4-wheel drive enables smooth power transfer to front wheels at all turning angles giving efficient operations in tight places, allowing the BX1500 to mow where 2-wheel drive tractors can't. Hydrostatic power steering is standard.

The BX1500 maintains a Category I, 3-point hitch and rear 540 PTO, with a mid-PTO for the mid-mount mower and front mount implements. An extra thick, full-length, welded steel, ladder shaped frame makes the BX1500 rugged and durable.

The front loader and mid-mount mower are performance matched and can both be attached while the tractor is working. The mower deck can be raised 5-inches making it easy to move around from one yard to another. Its LA181 front loader carries 398 lbs. attaching and detaching quickly, with no tools required.

The one lever joystick with a series circuit makes dumping fast and easy. Smaller size tires, similar to a garden tractor size, and a shorter, tractor length wheelbase allow the BX1500 to perform a wide variety of applications.

The Operator Presence Control System stops the mower blades and the engine automatically if the driver leaves the seat, with the PTO engaged, an important safety feature. ROPS (Roll Over Protective Structure) and seat belt provide an additional margin of safety not found on garden tractors.

Performance matched implements include a 48-inch and 54-inch mid-mount mower, rotary tiller, front loader, sweeper, snow blower, front/rear blade, box scraper, and ballast box. Other Category I, 3-point hitch implements, such as post hole augers and sprayers, can be used with the BX1500.

Kubota Wins Georgia Manufacturer Of Year

GAINESVILLE, Ga. — Kubota Manufacturing of America (KMA) was named Georgia Manufacturer of the Year in the large size company category by Georgia Governor Sonny Perdue (R) during ceremonies in April at the Cobb Galleria Centre in Atlanta.

KMA's selection as Georgia's manufacturing standout for 2002 is the result of its nomination by Lanier Technical College. Over one hundred other companies were nominated. "This is an important achievement for Kubota and recognizes our manufacturing excellence. We promise to continue to strive to be a high performance company and merit this valuable award. We will continue to support our community and our customers at the highest levels," said John Shiraishi, KMA President.

When making the award Gov. Perdue noted Kubota's 14-year investment in Georgia's economy. KMA affiliate Kubota Tractor Corporation (KTC) recently opened an all-new Research and Development lab and tractor assembly line in Oakwood, adding to the company's presence. Kubota also maintains a regional office and parts center in nearby Suwanee, Ga.

Ag Braking Standard To Be Revised

ST. JOSEPH, Mich. — The American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE) invites interested parties to participate in a project to revise its engineering standard for braking systems for agricultural field equipment.

According to ASAE Standards Director Scott Cedarquist, ASAE S365.5, Braking System Test Procedures and Braking Performance Criteria for Agricultural Field Equipment, will be revised to reflect state-of-the-art technology and trends in equipment, including higher travel speeds of agricultural equipment and the potential for worldwide harmonization of braking standards.

Preliminary efforts to revise the document are underway and will continue when ASAE's Agricultural Equipment Braking Committee, PM-03/1, meets at the ASAE Annual Meeting in Las Vegas (July 27-30). Meeting attendance is helpful but not required: much of the development work is accomplished electronically and through teleconferencing.

Participants in ASAE standards development are usually engineers, but non-engineers, especially farmers, are valued for their practical experience with engineered equipment and structures. Persons interested in learning more about the project or participating in the revision process should contact Scott Cedarquist at ASAE Headquarters (269) 428-6331 or e-mail cedarq@asae.org.

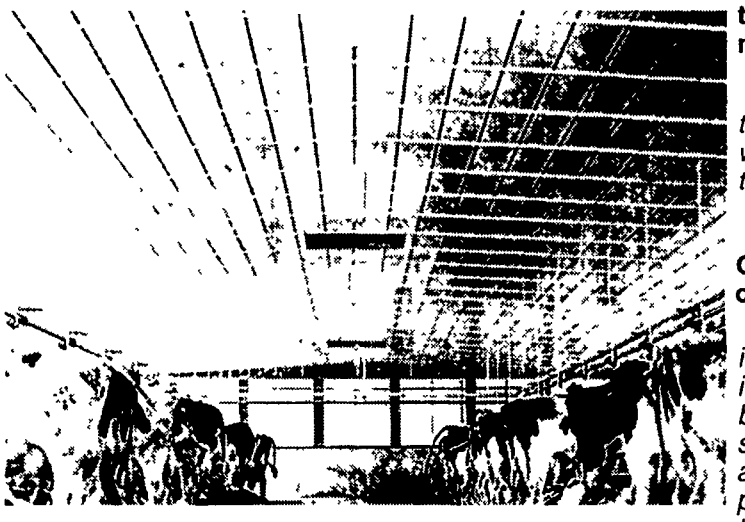
– Ceiling systems designed for your dairy, swine, and poultry facilities, as well – as shops, warehouses, garages, arenas, and more.

Tired of working in a cold, noisy shop?

These ceiling systems are designed to hold any amount of insulation, and with insulation above, produce sound reduction qualities much greater than steel.

Is the banding in your hog or poultry barn deteriorating?

Let us replace them with our heavier polyester bands which do not stretch or become brittle over time.



Are you frustrated with the birds in your implement shed?

Get the problem under control with a triply ceiling, as well as greatly improving the lighting

Contemplating a drop ceiling?

Demand a triply ceiling above your drop ceiling if there is insulation being installed. This will serve as a vapor barrier along with permanently preventing falling insulation.

Providing the Ag industry with a very durable, attractive, waterproof, noncorrosive, alternative to conventional ceilings at a fraction of the cost.

From 20¢/Sq. Ft. Installed
